Economy Promising For B.C.

OTTAWA (CP) — The strongest economic recovery will occur in British Columbia this year and the Atlantic provinces will show the weakest performance, says a forecast released today on the 10 provinces' economic prospects.

The forecasts were prepared by the Conference Board in Canada, a private economic research group that includes business, government and labor members. It is the first province-by-province survey the board has done and follows two years of work to develop reliable information that matches published national economic totals.

British Columbia is experiencing a strong cyclical recovery in its goods-producing industries and that should produce real output growth this year of almost six per cent. This will moderate in 1977 to about five-per-cent real growth, slightly more than the expected national average, the board says.

While output will increase, jobless rates are expected to increase sharply to 9.5 per cent on average this year from 8.6 per cent in 1975 and to rise to almost 10 per cent in 1977.

Ontario's economic recovery is likely to be slower than in other areas, while in Quebec, despite the Olympic Games, economic performance will be sluggish well into 1977.

In the West, the strong Alberta economy is expected to falter because of declining oil production and reduced agricultural output.

The board's forecasts are summarized provincially by major regions.

In the Atlantic region, Nova Scotia's prospects are optimistic. All major economic sectors, except manufacturing, show greater strength this year than in 1975. Unemployment will fall in the second half this year, but overall will average about 9.2 per cent of the work force in 1976, up from 7.8 per cent last year. Retail sales are expected to rise by 14 per cent.

New Brunswick's economy will be weak, likely showing real growth of about four per

B.C. to Get New Logo

British Columbia will soon have a new logo gracing all government stationery and literature.

And it won't be the stylized version featuring mountain and sea commissioned by the NDP, but a symbol incorporating the traditional dogwood emblem, the provincial coat of arms and the name of the province.

The logo is being drawn up by Dave Brown, the special adviser in the premier's office who was hired at a salary of $150-a day to complete a report on government communication services.

Brown said today the logo he is working on is not new. "The last thing we need to do is to get into something new that will upset the people who like the traditional dogwood.

"I'm playing around with the use of the name B.C., the coat of arms and the dogwood," he said.

OLYMPIC IMPOSTOR FURORE

Canadian Expelled

MARTIN

Times News Services

MONTREAL — Robert Martin of Paris, Ont., a member of Canada's track team, was expelled from the Olympics today for allowing a non-accredited athlete friend to occupy quarters in the athletes' village, Maurice Allan, chef de mission for the Canadian team, announced.

Martin had been scheduled to take part in the men's 100-metre heats to celebrate his 26th birthday today and also was a member of the 4x100-metre relay team.

The incident began Thursday when it was reported that an impostor — named Paul Wilkinson, an athlete from Oregon—had been living with members of the Canadian track team for almost two weeks without being accredited to the Games.

A subsequent investigation by members of the Canadian delegation and by security forces in the village led to a Thursday night statement that the whole affair was a hoax perpetrated by an athlete from another country.

The members of the delegation and security forces said they had arrived at this conclusion after interrogating the Canadian athletes at a team meeting, with special emphasis placed on the 12 members of the two relay teams.

"Up to 6 p.m. yesterday the information we had following our inquiries gave us reason to believe the story of an impostor was wrong," Sgt. J. L. Gagnon of the Montreal police said.

But he said new information later became available when the athletes again were questioned.

"We now confirm that the person involved (Wilkinson) was in the Olympic village without accreditation," he said. "We held a special meeting with Robert Martin and must now confirm what MANGLED WRECKAGE of luxury car is surveyed by wrecking firm employees after spectacular 3 a.m. accident that saw vehicle hit stone wall then wrap around tree. The 17-year-old driver was pinned in wreckage but escaped serious injury because of fast rescue by nearby homeowner and Saanich firemen.

FORD INCREASES PHONE BUGGING

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the House of Representatives investigations subcommittee said today the Ford administration has asked American Telephone and Telegraph Co. (ATT) to install many more wiretaps than the Nixon administation did.

"We've seen a marked, dramatic increase under Ford," said Representative John Moss (Dem. Calif.) "Who is he tapping? Why the escalation?"

Moss made the statments as ATT officials refused to give the subcommittee their records of the government's national security wiretap requests. They acted in accordance with an order by a U.S. District Court judge.

The judge's temporary restraining order Thursday representated a victory for President Ford, who had asked the justice department to take court action "to prevent the disclosure of this sensitive information."

Moss said a justice department affidavit outlining its wiretap requests to ATT shows 76 in 1972; 95 in 1973; 141 in 1974, with 115 of them after Ford became president in August; 141 again in 1975 and 58 for the first six months of this year.

There was no indication whether the requests came from Ford himself or from others in his administration.

Construction Mediator

Labor Minister Allan Williams has appointed a mediator in the construction strike-lockout and will select a second one Monday to deal with the B.C. Hydro contract dispute.

Former associate deputy labor minister Jim Kinnaird was named Thursday to bring in a non-binding report on the construction industry negotiations within 14 days.

The appointment was announced by Williams after meeting the both sides.

The labor minister said no back-to-work legislation is contemplated.

"There is not going to be any legislation with this dispute."

Williams said both sides had agreed to accept the appointment of Kinnaird, a former president of the B.C. and Yukon Building Trades Council.

When he was in the labor department last October, Kinnaird in a report to the previous government had warned that hassles would continue in construction negotiations unless unions formed a joint bargaining council.

Both sides agreed in principle with the report but the unions were unable to come up with a formula for implementing the idea and, this month, a last-minute effort to form a single bargaining agency was defeated 8-7 by the 15 trade unions involved in negotiations.

The lockout of 40,000 workers began three weeks ago after strikes by the cement masons and carpenters.

Lum Denies Profits

Saanich Mayor Ed Lum today denied huge profits would be made through rezoning of land in the Vanalman and Glanford area for a proposed industrial park.

On Thursday Lawrence Cook, chairman of a concerned citizen's group charged developers and land speculators would make profits of up to $12 million if the land now part of the agriculture freeze was rezoned for industrial use.

Cook based his calculations on the assumption the property has been selling for between $2 to $3.50 a square foot as agriculture land and yet would go for between $9.50 to $11 a square foot if zoned industrial.

But Lum said Cook "should get his facts straight."

The industrial site would only permit light, clean industries, such as warehousing, he said, and "if anyone paid more than $4.50 a square foot for the property he'd be out of his mind."

Lum said the profit margin would be relatively small as developers would be required to pay $50,000 to $60,000 an acre for water and sewage services, as well as absorb costs of buffer zones.

He also replied to charges of council being vague about the ultimate size of the site by saying the proposal had been set out in the regional plan "with all the boundaries drawn."

Lum said the industrial park would be a maximum of 120 acres with 20 to 25 acres set aside as buffer zones.

Stiff Taxes, Cutbacks Face Britons

Times News Services

LONDON — Britain's Labor government Thursday junked 30 years of Keynesian policy and announced a stiff, $3.4 billion deflationary package at a time of high and rising unemployment.

Denis Healey, chancellor of the exchequer, told Parliament he will slash next year $1.8 billion from a wide list of Labor's favorite programs. They range from job subsidies through school lunches to public housing. This, however, had been expected.

But Healey also will slap a $1.6 billion tax on business that can be passed on to consumers through higher prices. That was a shock.

Healey told reporters, "This has been the most difficult, dangerous and exhausting task I have yet had to face as chancellor." He and Prime Minister James Callaghan spent seven gruelling meetings to get the package through the cabinet.

MAGNETIC TRIGGERS PROTECT POLICEMEN

FOSTER CITY, Calif. (AP) — A magnetic device to prevent crooks from shooting policemen with their own guns is being installed in all revolvers used by the Foster City police department.

"We are the first police agency in the world to equip our men with this device," Police Chief John Norton said Thursday.

The mechanism works by means of a metal inset in the grip of the pistol. It has a moving part that blocks trigger operation unless the shooter wears a special magnetic ring on his finger. When the ring comes within an inch of the trigger-block, the gun can fire.

The invention is the work of Joseph Smith of Sunyvale, who calls it the "Magna-Trigger Safety." Smith said he expects the device will save lives unrelated to police work.

"A child living in a house where a gun is kept could not shoot himself or a playmate," he said.

Saanich 'Jaws' Save Life First Day on the Job

By PAUL NICHOLSON

Times Staff

A fast-moving Oak Bay resident and Saanich firemen joined forces early today in a dramatic rescue of a youth trapped in the tangled wreckage of a demolished luxury car.

The resident — Phil Ballam, of 498 Beach Drive — snuffed out a fire that threatened to engulf the car and its 17-year-old driver, Michael Donegani.

And the firemen — using a "jaws of life" machine acquired by their department only 24 hours earlier — sliced through the wreckage to haul Donegani to safety.

Donegani, 17, of 995 Terrace, was the driver of a Mercedes Benz that went out of control about 3 a.m. on Beach Avenue, caromed off a rock wall and wrapped itself around a tree.

"I heard a terrific noise and ran outside," Ballam said, "Two young lads were standing near the wreckage yelling: 'It's going to blow.'"

Ballam said the car had slammed into the pole with such force that its undercarriage was sticking up in the air.

"It was a mess," he said.

Ballam said he spotted a small fire and heard someone inside the car gasping. He ran into his house for the extinguisher and called Oak Bay police.

He said the fire was easy to put out, but when the gasping stopped inside the car, he thought the young man had died.

"I was just amazed when the boy came-to when the rescue equipment arrived," Ballam said.

He said the jaws-of-life was like a big pair of tinsnips:

"Crunch, crunch, crunch, and away came the roof. There was no other way to get him out," he said.

Meanwhile the three municipal fire departments on the Saanich peninsula will also be armed with a jaws of life machine thanks to the Sidney Rotary Club.

The service club has donated the hydraulic rescue tool priced at about $7,800 to the town of Sidney, to be held in trust for use by North Saanich, Central Saanich and Sidney fire squads.

SCIENTISTS TREAT VIKING'S ARM LOCK

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Viking officials believe they have diagnosed, and can easily solve, a malfunction on the Mars lander that caused its soil-scooping arm to jam.

If their theory of the failure is correct, project manager Jim Martin said Thursday night, the beginning of the search for life on Mars next Wednesday will not be affected.

Martin said the telescoping arm, designed to reach out for a handful of Martian soil and dump it in a small biology laboratory, jammed Thursday after being extended for a test.

It jammed while being retracted, he said, apparently because a locking pin that should have fallen free did not do so.

ENGINE FIRE HITS QE-2

LONDON (UPI) — A fire in the engine room of the 65,000-ton Queen Elizaberth-2 forced the liner to return to port in Southampton today.

A spokesman for the Cunard Shipping Co., the owners of the vessel, said the fire broke out earlier today when the QE-2 was 80 miles off the Scilly Islands enroute to New York. The blaze took 50 minutes to extinguish and the ship remained stationary for several hours.

Hospital Back Pay Row Brewing

Union and management representatives are meeting today to settle an outstanding issue holding back payment of wage increases for 16,000 Hospital Employees Union workers.

The meeting was scheduled following charges by Jack Gerow, HEU general secretary, that the Health Labor Relations Association is stalling on payment of the wage settlement they were ordered to pay when the provincial government ordered striking workers back to work.

Gerow said the hospitals have not paid either the eight per cent general increase retroactive to Jan. 1 or the 3.4 per cent cost-of-living adjustment due June 1.

In a letter to hospital industry troubleshooter Neil Munroe, Gerow said he wants the matter solved within five days or the union may be forced to take job action to disrupt health care delivery in B.C.

"Unless our members get what is their's by law and by all justice, it seems inevitable that the peace imposed by the Hospital Services Collective Agreement Act will be shattered," said Gerow.

HLRA spokesman Bill Rolfe said today hospital management is "trying to implement the agreement as quickly as possible" but there is still a payroll dispute as to how the hourly rate will be calculated.

The union, he said, is arguing for a new wage calculation that would be "inappropriate and unworkable and would cause the need to change all computer payroll methods."

He said there is "no way" HLRA will be able to implement pay increases within Gerow's specified five days.

Rolfe said HLRA would welcome "quick arbitration" to settle the matter, but under Bill 75 only Gerow has the following options: He can take the matter to the Labor Relations Board, apply for arbitration on the issue, which the employer cannot do, or take the matter to Munroe.

Munroe is scheduled to be in on today's management-union meeting.

The contract is currently before the Anti-Inflation Board, and the provincial legislation ordering the collective agreement did not specify that new wages had to be paid June 1, said Rolfe.

Kenya Quits Handicapped Olympics

TORONTO (CP) — Kenya has withdrawn from the Olympics for the Physically Disabled because South Africa is taking part, an official of the Olympics said Thursday.

Lillian Calhoun, secretary to the executive director of the games, which will be held Aug. 3 to 11, said Kenya was to have sent a 24-member team of blind, amputee and wheelchair athletes.

South Africa's participitation has also cost the Olympics a $500,000 federal grant refused because of South Africa's policy of apartheid. The South African team is integrated.

Bangladesh, Chile, Iran, Portugal, and the Philippines also have withdran—because of financial problems.

Forty-six countries will send 1,453 athletes to the games.

TERRORIST SAID AT GAMES

OTTAWA (CP) — An Iraqui with a name similar to that of a reported Palestine guerrilla applied for but did not get a visa to visit Canada, the external affairs department said today.

The department said Al-Kayali Abdul Wahab Said, a legal adviser to the Iraqi government, applied for a two-month tourist visa to Canada in June.

A spokesman gave that information in response to a London report that Abdel Wahab Said al Kiala, described by the Daily Telegraph as a member of a militant Palestinian guerrilla group, was believed in Montreal. The spokesman said the department still is checking the matter.

The Telegraph says that the man is a general secretary of the Arab Liberation Front (ALF) of Bagdad, Iraq.

The newspaper, in a front-page story, quotes sources in the Middle East as saying Kiali arrived in Montreal the day before the Olympic Games and is believed to be still there even though Iraq has joined African countries in withdrawing from the Games.

The newspaper says Israeli sources do not see Kiali's presence in Montreal as evidence that a terrorist attack is being planned. But it says that Israel considers the front as one of its principal terrorist enemies.

was in the papers is correct."

Asked if the discovery of the imposter would mean a further tightening of security in the village for both the athletes and visitors, Gagnon said it was "quite logical to conclude" this.

"Security measures were set up to protect the athletes. The athletes know where the weaknesses are," he added, noting that one of the athletes had now breached this security measures and a check of identification cards will be stricter.

Gagnon said the police had talked to Wilkinson, but he would provide no further details as to the whereabouts of the intruder or whether charges would be laid in connection with the case.

He said it had been determined that Martin and Wilkinson had attended university together and had been friends for some time.

He said that Wilkinson was able to carry out the ruse because he also knew other members of the team.

Meanwhile, following reports of a Russian attempt to fix the outcome of Olympic diving, the international swimming federation said late Thursday night it has set up a system to guard against corrupt judging of diving events.

The governing body for aquatic sports, known as FINA, announced an undefined system of checks after a special meeting to look into the reports.

Tom Gumpf, manager of the U.S. diving team and a judge at the 1972 Olympics, was quoted earlier charging unnamed Soviet diving officials of proposing a point-swapping deal between American and Russian diving judges that would have helped Soviet springboard star Irina Kalinina and American springboarder Phil Boggs.

Gompf later denied he had said there was a points-swapping proposal.

Economic Outlook Promising for B.C.

cent only, compared with a national average of five per cent. This performance should improve in 1977 as fishing, manufacturing and construction industries improve. Unemployment this year, however, is expected to grow from less than 10 per cent last year to more than 11 per cent in 1976.

Newfoundland will have a jobless rate of about 13 per cent this year and again in 1977, well above the national average of just over seven per cent. Real output growth of four per cent— up from two per cent last year—will still fall below the expected national output growth of five per cent. Strength in the fishing, forestry and construction industries will be largely offset by sluggish mining and manufacturing output.

Prince Edward Island's recession in 1975 was less than other areas, and the province should show a moderate increase in real output this year. Higher potato prices this year will benefit residents, but unemployment will rise to more than 10 per cent in 1976 from 8.8 per cent last year, the board said.

In Quebec, real output declined during 1975 by two-tenths of one per cent, the same as the national rate of decline. Recovery in output will be sluggish this year and next. Most industries are strong, except for manufacturing and construction. But a construction slump is not projected for the post Olympic period because residential building activity is high, even though the industry will grow more slowly than previously. Unemployment will remain at about eight per cent.

Ontario's real output grew during 1975 by 1.3 per cent, and recovery will be weak. For 1976, real output for the province will be only slightly ahead of the national average.

Retail sales will be weak because of poor auto markets early this year. The jobless rate is forecast to climb to 6.5 per cent this year and to seven per cent in 1977, up from 6.4 per cent on average in 1975, he board said.

In the Prairie provinces, Manitoba's real output growth this year will be weaker than the national average, but should improve next year. Average unemployment of five per cent will be about the same this year as in 1975.

Saskatchewan's real output growth for 1976 is forecast at 4.5 per cent, less than the national average, and jobless rates will rise to 4.5 per cent from three per cent last year.

Retail sales are expected to rise by 13 per cent this year, but to slump to a 6.5-per-cent increase in 1977.

Alberta's economic performance was the strongest in the country in 1975, but in 1976 real output will fall below the national average of five per cent. There will be further weakening in 1977 because of a weak outlook in agriculture and the mining industry, which results from lower oil production. Unemployment will rise gradually to an average of about 4.2 per cent this year from 4.1 per cent in 1975 and will increase to about 4.4 per cent in 1977—still well below the national average.

Some of the 850 companies in the Construction Labor Relations Association subsequently resumed operations and have been sent warning letters from CLRA officials.

In the B.C. Hydro dispute, both sides agreed to the appointment of an industrial inquiry commissioner (mediator) after a series of selective strikes and lockouts, which began July 6.

After his appointment Monday, the mediator will have two weeks to bring in a non-binding report.

Negotiations broke down in mid-June when a previous mediator, Charles Stewart, reported to the labor minister he had not been able to find a formula both sides would accept.

The union represents 3,500 of the 12,000 people employed by B.C. Hydro. The Crown corporation had locked out 500 of its employees this week in response to selective stike action and work-to-rule tactics.

There has been no direct effect on the public from the strike-lockout except that electricity bills to some customers are being estimated where exact counts cannot be obtained. These estimates are by computer and based on seasonal consumption patterns.

An adjustment will be made later to bring the estimate into line with the actual consumption.

ENVOY'S ASSASSINS POSED AS WORKMEN

DUBLIN (UPI) — The assassins of British ambassador Christipher Ewart-Biggs wandered freely outside his home for days disguised as power repairmen while they set up their bomb attack, police said.

Officers leading the investigation into the killing said Thursday the bombers waited and watched in the fields in front of Glencairn House on the outskirts of Dublin while they worked out heir plan.

Their disguise as employees of the state-run electricity board was a perfect cover as they stretched 200 yards of wire to a culvert along the road over which Ewart-Biggs drove every day.

They linked the wire to a 200-pound land mine and, police said, were able to watch the ambassador's automobile from his front gate to the culvert — where Wednesday the finally set off the mine by remote control.

Wallace Worried On 'Easy Parole'

Rapists and other violent criminals appear to be getting paroled too easily, Conservative leader Scott Wallace said Thursday.

The Oak Bay MLA, who also announced he will attend a meeting in Mission next month to discuss prisons and prison camps in the Fraser Valley, emphasized he is not against the concept of parole.

But he said it seems that offenders with a record of violent crimes get parole "too readily" with the result they repeat the same kind of crime "with the same tragic results".

"The number of assautls on women in the Lower Mainland involving rape and murder in recent months is most disturbing," Wallace said.

Wallace said parole boards do their best but added: "It is absolutely essential that all levels of authority recognize the protection of the community as their first and overriding responsibility."

AIB Probes Cheap Beef Profiting

OTTAWA (FP)—The Anti-Inflation Board has launched a probe into whether restaurants and fast food chains are using cheap beef imported from Australia and New Zealand and are not passing on the benefits f lower costs to their customers.

Jean Luc Pepin, chairman of the board, in a letter to Herb Gray, former member of the Trudeau cabinet informed the Liberal MP for Windsor West Thursday that the board is closely monitoring the level of food prices.

Gray has asked the board that where warranted it take immediate corrective action under the Anti-Inflation Act. He wants to ensure that the lower costs for imported Australian and New Zealand beef are passed on to Canadian consumers.

3 Wealthy Misfits Sought In Bus Abduction Case

SAN LEANDRO, Calif. (AP) — Three armed and dangerous men from wealthy California families are the target of a nationwide hunt today, sought for questioning in the kidnapping and imprisonment of 26 Chowchilla school children and their bus driver.

An all-points bulletin named Frederick Woods, 24, James Schoenfeld, 24, and Richard Schoenfeld, 22. It described them as armed and dangerous and told police to "arrest on probable cause."

Alameda County Sheriff Tom Houchins and Madera County Sheriff Ed Bates told a news conference Thursday night that ransom may have been the motive for kidnapping the youngsters and burying them alive inside a van in a Livermore rock quarry owned by Woods' father.

Houchins confirmed earlier reports that the younger Woods owned the moving van used to imprison the school children four feet underground. It took the youngsetrs and the driver 18 hours to tunnel out.

Police had searched the Woods's 100-acre suburban San Mateo County estate Thursday. San Mateo County Sheriff John McDonald said police had been looking for "vans, masks and guns."

He said new searches were under way at Woods properties in Sonora County and San Jose where police were seeking more vehicles.

Two vans were used to transport the Chowchilla children after the kidnappers camouflaged the school bus from which the children and driver were taken.

Bates said one of the men being sought has not been seen since the incident and that officials expect to know today "whether they are out of state and if they are we will ask the FBI to come in."

The Woods family is related to the wealthy California Newhall family, which holds vast investments in commercial and recreational ventures, agriculture, cattle operations, oil, gas and land.

HIKE-AWARD APPEAL LOST

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia court of appeal Thursday refused to reinstate a $1.5-million damage award against the Prince George school board, in a claim by a former student paralyzed for life as the result of a 1971 gymnastics accident.

Gary Thornton, who was 15 years old at the time of the accident, originally was awarded $1.5 million in damages, but that award was reduced to $650,000 on an appeal by the school board.

A pesky area of cool moist air which has afflicted the B.C. weather pattern for the past while is now showing signs of retreating to the Gulf of Alaska. As this movement occurs a drying trend will develop over most of the province. Rising temperatures and increasing sunshine is anticipated over southern regions over the next two days. On the outer coast, however, considerable cloud will persist with a few showers or some drizzle. Afternoon showers are likely also over northern portions of the Interior.

Land Villains Hunted

OTTAWA (CP) — Urban Affairs Minister Barney Danson today asked provincial housing ministers today to join in detective work to find out who the real villains are in high land costs for housing.

Federal officials say that once there is general agreement on who is responsible for pushing up land costs, governments will have a better chance to deal with the problem.

Danson said after a cabinet meeting Thursday that he hopes he could get agreement on a thorough study of the land issue from provincial housing ministers at a meeting here today.

The provinces have been reluctant to discuss the land issue with the fedeal government because land transaction is considered largely under provincial jurisdiction, he said.

While there have been a number of government and private sutdies on housing and land costs, there is disagreement about who the main villains are in the land cost problem.

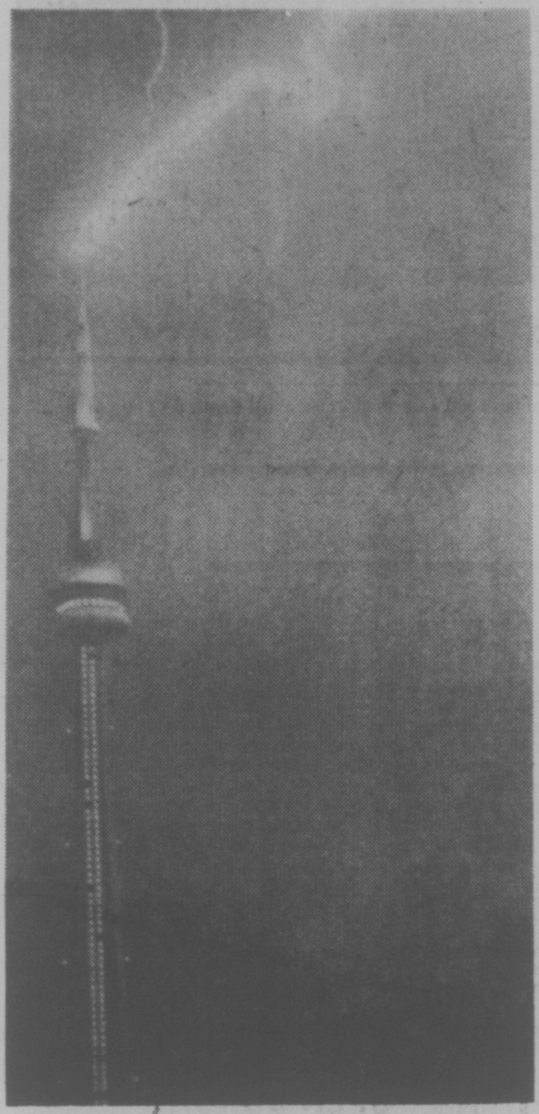
A study prepared for the Housing and Urban Development Association last year blamed the politician and government bureaucrat.

The HUDAC study said government controls on land planning, servicing and development contributed to what the study determined was a shortage of serviced land ready for residential construction. This land scarcity pushed up costs.

A background study prepared by government officials for the recent Habitat conference also said high costs result from intense demand for a limited land supply.

But unlike the HUDAC study, the Habitat document concluded that monopoly control over land ownership in many Canadian centres was probably a big factor in higher prices. This was because a few big landowners could restrict supply of land for the housing market.

A report written by researcher Peter Spurr for the Central Mortgage and Housing Corp., however, concluded there is no real land shortage.



TOWER POWER to the 1,815 foot 5 inch CN tower in Toronto seems to be coming from this bolt of lightning which zapped the world's tallest free-standing building during a recent thunderstorm. The tower, however, was constructed to take such an incident and thunderbolts pose no danger to people within the structure.

Clearwater MD Crisis Feared

CLEARWATER (CP) — For the second time in six years this community of 2,500 north of Kamloops faces a doctor crisis.

The four general practitioner here are threatening to pull out over a year-long dispute that involves hospital administrator Mrs. Kathleen Rice, Two of the doctors, Bruce Anderson and Odell Olson, have resigned from the hospital and recently Mrs. Rice tendered her resignation.

A joint committee made up of representatives from the B.C. health department's hospital programs and representatives of both the B.C. College of Physicians and Surgeons and the B.C. Medical Association held hearings Thursday and are expected to make some recommendations to the Clearwater hospital board next week.

In the menatime almost 1,500 residents, who are part of a population of about 7,000 in the area that the doctors serve, have signed a petition backing up the doctors.

Mrs. Lou Greffard, one of several persons who circulated the petition, said Thursday: "For the sake of the people here we think the administrator should go. What good is it to have a hospital without doctors?"

The fight six years ago involved Dr. Rudy Regehr, then Clearwater's only doctor, the hospital board and the then Social Credit Health Minister Ralph Loffmark.

At that time the community did not have a hospital, although one had been promissed, and Loffmark was accused of threatening Dr. Regehr who said he would pull out unless a hospital was built.

Regehr did pull out and the area was looked after for a time by a doctor from Loffmark's Vancouver riding.

Dr. Anderson said the current problem "has been going on too long and we have probably kept it from the community too long. What is happening is not in the best interest of the community."

Dr. Anderson refused to detail the dispute but said a part of the problem is "a bureaucratic menagerie where we have more people administrating the hospital than we have nurses."

The hospital has about 18 beds, two nurses, two administrators, two front office staff and a medical records clerk, Dr. Anderson said.

The doctors are all members of the same clinic and have all agreed to leave if the problem is not cleared up quickly.

"if we go we will have to do it fairly soon," Dr. Anderson said. "We would have to do it soon because the community would need time to try to get other doctors before school begins and winter starts."

Mrs. Rice, who is originally from Ireland and was a nurse for a time in the Lower Mainland, could not be reached for comment.

Rhodesia Will Draft Blacks, Servicemen Sought Overseas

SALISBURY (AP) — Blacks would be drafted into the Rhodesian armed services for the first time under legislation introduced today.

Prime Minister Ian Smith also said his government would ease some public restrictions on blacks, but has rejected three major racial reforms.

The proposed draft law would call blacks into military service for the first time, but Co-ordination Minister Reg Cowper said they would not necessarily be made to fight aginst the black nationalist guerrillas.

Only certain categories of blacks would be drafted under the law. Those categories were not disclosed, but observers said they would probably be blacks capable of doing desk jobs, releasing whites for combat.

While half of Rhodesia's soldiers are black, they are volunteers. There are no black officers, but the government has announced plans to train blacks to lead units in combat areas.

Smith told parliament: "I hope that today all Rhodesians will join with me in saying that we must remove from our country the injustice and the indignity of trying to grade people into superior and inferior categories according to the color of their skin."

The Rhodesian government has also launched an international recruiting drive for foreigners to join the Rhodesian army to fight black nationalist guerrillas.

The white minority government says the recruits are not mercenaries, but immigrants who receive the same pay as Rhodesians.

The influx of foreigners coincides with an exodus of Rhodesia's own whites in face of increasing warfare with blacks intent on toppling Smiths' white-minority regime.

The recruiting has brought in veterans of Vietnam, the Malaysian anti-guerrilla campaign and the Portuguese colonial wars in Mozambique and Angola.

The Rhodesian government officially denies that it seeks mercenaries for the armed forces, but reporters who visit the operational areas, where security forces are fighting black guerrillas, often come across American, Britons, South Africans, Germans, Greeks and Portuguese who have only recently arrived in the country.

Advertisements have been placed in South African and British newspapers and American magazines asking for former soldiers interested in "A Service Career in the Sun," the Johannesburg newspaper Daily Rand says.

ATTENDANCE POOR, SCHOOLS CLOSED

JOHANNESBURG (UPI) — Black schools around Johannesburg and Pretoria failed ot hold classes today for the second straight day.

Several headmasters told the handful of pupils who showed up to go home and come back Monday.

The schools reopened Thursday after a month-long closure following racial violence in which 176 persons died. But attendance has been poor and educators blame it on short notice.

A spokesman for the Bantu (African) Affairs Department that administers schools and townships east of Johannesburg said attendance at schools in that area and in Pretoria are expected to resume normally Monday, adding that black schools in townships south of Johannesburg had full attendances.

Que. MLAs Prepare Law To End Nurses' Strike

QUEBEC (CP) — The national assembly will convene tonight in an emergency session to vote on legislation forcing Quebec's 5,500 striking nurses back to work, Premier Robert Bourassa's office announced Thursday.

The legislature's 110 members have been recalled from their vacations to consider the special legislation ending the five-week strike by members of the Quebec Nurses Federation.

The strike has shut own or severely curtailed emergency services at most Montreal French-language hospitals and has brought charges that lives have been endangered because of a lack of health care.

Social Affairs Minister Claude Forget warned nurses Wednesay that they had until 6 p.m. Friday to accept the government's latest contract offers, but the nurses have made no move to end the strike since the ultimatum was issued.

Forget said the government held off on back-to-work legislation in the hope of negotiating a settlement, but did not expect the union to change its hard-line stance.

The minister would not give details of the back-to-work law but said it would be different from the ones enacted earlier in the year ordering teachers and non-professional hospital workers back to their jobs.

At issue are working hours and job mobility.

TRUDEAU GETS PUSHY WITH RADIO MAN

OTTAWA (CP) — Pre-vacation tempers flared Thursday as Prime Minister Trudeau engaged in a short, testy exchange with a radio reporter about who had pushed whom.

"Don't push me," Trudeau told James Munson of Standard Broacast News following some questions in a Commons corridor after another cabinet meeting before the government breaks for an August holiday.

"I didn't push you," replied Munson.

"You did push me," said the prime minister, raising his fist.

"You pushed me," said Mr. Munson.

"I'll push you again," said Trudeau.

Then he turned, broke through a knot of reporters and cameramen and strode down the hall.

Profits for Whom?

So you thought the Habitat conference in Vancouver was an irrelevant waste of time with little application to the real problems of the world? Well, in Saanich being played out these days is a perfect example of what that United Nations talkfest was all about — community resources and who should profit by them.

The controversy over the proposed industrial park in the Vanalman-Glanford area illustrates one of the central concerns of Habitat. The conference broke up in disarray because the member nations, in part, couldn't agree on what constitutes "appropriate" value.

Socialist countries and developing nations wanted a tough resolution which stated that all the increased value created when land is rezoned should accrue to the govrnment. This was unacceptable to western representatives, who lobbied successfully for an amended version which mentioned an "appropriate" part of the increment.

Of course, the residents of Saanich fighting the industrial park aren't all that concerned about the money some owners are going to make. Like homeowners everywhere, they are concerned about the intrusion of industry upon a quiet semi-rural residential area, and secondarily about the decline in their property values an industrial park will cause.

But the instant inflation on property value at the site of the park which will surely follow rezoning should also concern Saanich taxpayers. Council may have plans in this regard — say a land-use contract with the owners by which Saanich would benefit from the increase too — but it has not made its intentions very clear.

Such a decision is not socialism, but simple common sense. Saanich has the example of Vancouver, which rezoned downtown land owned by the CPR and got a large part of the increased value. A windfall created solely by action of a council representing all residents and property-owners of Saanich should not go just to a few speculators.

Work and Learn

Conservative Leader Joe Clark came up with a capital idea this week as he was touring southern Ontario on a low-key meet-the-people campaign. If he were elected prime minister, he said he would send the cabinet out to tour Canada regularly, to talk to people (and here's the revolutionary part!) before decisions affecting them are made.

It would keep politicians in closer touch with people, and perhaps reduce the sense of alienation from Ottawa and the central decision-making process felt by many Canadians.

But that's not all. Even more amazing, Clark would have civil servants disrupt their comfortable routines in the capital for a couple of weeks a year to mingle with the common folk. As we understood the scheme, middle management types from the department of agriculture, for example, would spend time actually working on a farm, seeing where the milk and bacon and bread actually come from. Urban affairs bureaucrats would spend their time talking to the "inmates" of public housing projects and those who can't find an affordable house. Consumer and corporate affairs staff would put in a week on the used car lots or cruising supermarket aisles.

The idea is borrowed from the People's Republic of China, where physical labor and hard work is an esteemed character- and nation-builder. Soft city-dwelling office workers are sent out to the countryside to help bring in the harvest, and prospective university students must first spend a couple of years on a rural commune.

Naturally, such a good idea should not be limited to the federal government. It has tremendous potential for British Columbia as well. A work-while-you-learn plan should be instituted at once for the benefit of the greenhorns in Premier Bill Bennett's cabinet.

A week or two as a claims adjuster might do wonders for Education Minister Pat McGeer's ICBC policies. Consumer Services Minister Rafe Mair might not be so quick to say that "a kick in the ass" is good for you if he to listen for a while to nothing else but the pitches of door-to-door encyclopedia salesmen. Then Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm could be handed $160 — a single man's monthly welfare allowance — and told to come back four weeks later, but don't spend it all in one place. Labor Minister Allan Williams as executive assistant to Len Guy? Transport Minister Jack Davis as a pie slicer on the B.C. Ferries?

New Tough Guy on Block

OTTAWA — The cabinet's position on Taiwan and the Olympics is logically impeccable, has excellent antecedents, and despite this has brought the government intense and often bitter opposition and criticism from Canadians.

Understandably, ministers are seriously disturbed by the affair which has probably done more than any other individual episode to drive home to the Trudeau government the extent of its unpopularity in the country. The reaction has been so widespread, so at variance with a reasonable view of the facts, that it is impossible to avoid a disturbing conclusion: that the Trudeau government is now so unpopular in the country that whatever it does, good or bad, is tarred with this same unpopularity.

If that is true, as it seems to be, it is indeed disturbing because the country is two years away from an election, with serious problems ahead. The authority a government needs to deal with real problems is visibly absent in the present situation and it is the quality that will be sorely needed when the cabinet finally turns its attention to the balance of payments crisis into which we are heading. Crisis point is likely to be reached not much later than year end and could arrive sooner than that.

Highly Unpopular Gov't

Under these circumstances, an early election would be the only real way of clarifying the situation and, depending upon the results it produced, restoring an essential level of confidence. But there is no way in which an early election can be produced when the government has a safe majority. We will inevitably find ourselves dealing with critical problems through a government whose authority is not willingly accepted in the country.

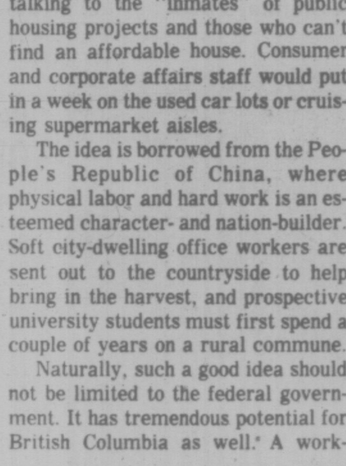
It is worth tracing the history of the Taiwan affair to show the justification for the government's position because, without this, the significance of the popular reaction does not become fully clear.

The 1969 letter from Canada to the Olympic committee guaranteed the entry of athletes pursuant to normal regulations and this is a clear caveat which must have had a specific meaning at that time. It did. It was included to prevent Canada's international policies from becoming embarrassed by this sort of imbroglio but Taiwan was not the source of worry then. The potential problem was seen as East Germany, which on all possible occasions was seeking international recognition from countries outside the communist bloc. Canada forsaw the possibility of embarrassment with hits NATO partners and entered the caveat to protect its position.

As an outgrowth of Chancellor Willy Brandt's policies western positions toward East Germany changed and the presence of that country at the Olympics causes no political embarrassment. Also, in the meantime Canada has broken diplomatic relations with Taiwan and established them with China. One of the first developments that followed that change of recognition involved a Taiwan boxing team scheduled to come to Canada in 1970. The government was willing to admit it as a Taiwan team but refused it entry as a team from "the Republic of China." The position the government takes now is not, therefore, new.

There is disagreement between Lord Killanin and the IOC on one side and the Canadian government on the other over what was actually said at a meeting held in Toronto in April, 1975. Lord Killanin denies that he was warned of the problem. The government insists that he was. There is in existence a written record of that meeting which has never been published and apparently will not be unless 30 years from now someone remembers to look when it is deposited in the archives.

A non-political source who has studied the document carefully gives this account:



LORD KILLANIN
. . . shown to be dissembling

It is not a letter addressed to Lord Killanin but the official minute on the meeting prepared immediately afterwards by professional officers of the department of external affairs for internal use and record-keeping. It would have gone up to the under-secretary and probably the minister but never having been intended for publication there is no obvious reason to distrust its objectivity.

Among other things, it records that the Taiwan question was raised, not by Canada, but by the International Olympic Committee. The Canadian officials were asked what was to be expected in the case of Taiwan. They replied, according to this source's version of the minute, that there would inevitably be trouble if Taiwan's team attempted to enter as the "Republic of China." The Canadian officials were then asked by the IOC what would be necessary to change this situation at the Canadian end. They replied that a ministerial decision would be necessary and then warned that this would be most unlikely.

"Why don't we publish the minute?" the source was asked. "Simply because it records Lord Killanin's replies and it would cause him too much embarrassment."

It seems likely that the Canadian concern is not to spare Lord Killanin personal embarrassment and is more likely related to his known interest in drawing China — that is, the country on the Asian mainland — into the Olympic movement.

As for the introduction of politics into the Olympics, the 1960 solution in Rome was highly political. It arose not from the Italian government, but from the late Avery Brundage's efforts to get Taiwan back into the Olympics after an earlier IOC resolution to the effect that the national Olympic committee to be recognized would be from the mainland. And, of course, the Canadian government has been behaving in a somewhat less political way than the national Olympic committees of the African states withdrawing their teams in protest against New Zealand's presence. It has not escaped Canadian cabinet ministers that, despite this, the volume of criticism levelled at Canada has been far greater than anything aimed at the Africans.

Boy Scout No More

It seems obvious that there must be some connection between the extent of the criticism and the loss of public esteem the opinion polls show the government has suffered. But that does not explain the intensity of the international criticism, especially in the United States. It should not be forgotten though that the emotional commitment to Taiwan and against Peking is still an important factor in the United States.

Beyond this, however, Canada has been the boy scout of the international world, always ostentatiously on the side of virtue, exuding self-righteousness. We have suddenly stopped behaving like boy scouts and have instead behaved with a tough regard for long term Canadian interests. The new tough guy on the international scene is always unpopular although the world is accustomed to and quickly forgives the long-standing ones — the British, French, Americans, Russians and so on. No one knew this better than the late Indian leader, Jawaharlal Nehru.

When long negotiations failed to solve the problem of the Portuguese colony of Goa on the Indian coast, Nehru ordered the Indian army to put the colonial power out. His action outraged the world. No temper tantrum was worse than the late U.S. President John Kennedy's. His outrage was not over the liquidation of a colony. It happened because Nehru behaved out of character, shattering a stereotype.

Bi and Bi Vote

In reply to your correspondent Yvan Landry (Intolerance, July 13) who states that English is not being extinguished in Quebec, then he must be totally unaware of Bill 22 which was passed in the legislature there and which makes French the only official language in that province.

He appears himself to be one of the narrow-minded Quebeckers of whom he speaks for while noticing that 85 per cent of the residents of Quebec are French-speaking and because of this majority should have the right to remain that way, he has failed to observe that 85 per cent of the residents of Canada are English-speaking and should have the right not to be inconvenienced by and dictated to by the other 15 per cent. (Editor's Note: The 1971 census found 13 million Canadians who gave English as their mother tongue, and 5.8 million with French as mother tongue, out of a total of 21.6 million). I congratulate him on his inclination to vote for Rene Levesque and I wish I had a vote to do likewise. However, I shall be sending him a political contribution for the next Quebec election, for I believe the day he leads his fellow French-Canadians to "freedom" will be a blessing to all the other provinces.

But I feel it is only fair to warn Mr. Landry that Quebec is one of the have not provinces and will then be without the financial support of the richer provinces. Also their doom would seem a certainty for their insistence to speak only French would not enable them to communicate or trade with the rest of the vast North American continent, where the language of business and commerce is English.

I see no reason why the people of Canada today should be bound by an obsolete agreement signed over 100 years ago. The only democratic way to settle the whole bilingual issue would be a national vote to decide whether we should now have only one official language, or be stuck forever with the inconvenience and tremendous cost of appeasing French Canada. — Canada Libre.

Something Special

Perhaps two days is not enough time to form a valid impression of a city. In the case of Victoria, however, we feel that it takes much less time to realize that this town has something special going for it.

We were especially impressed with the combination of old and new that blends into an aesthetically pleasing whole. To the eye, Victoria's architecture offers many surprises and yet avoids the pitfall of urban garishness. Everywhere we turned we were presented with obvious examples of civic pride.

Moreover, it is apparent that this pride is not manifested in grandiose projects but in efforts to make the city more liveable. Perhaps our perspective is somewhat biased by the fact that we come from a city, Montreal, that has sadly succumbed to the pursuit of a certain type of grandeur that has little to do with the day-to-day well-being of its citizens. Nevertheless, we feel we can say with some degree of objectivity that Victoria has been the best town we've seen on our cross-country travels so far. We were also heartened by the courtesy of Victorians and the openness of the city in general. — Kirk Stevens, Chris Wood, Montreal.

Important Summit

To interested observers of world communism, the summit meeting of communists in East Berlin recently was of tremendous importance. When Yugoslavia first destroyed the myth of the monolith, the world could hardly believe it and many thought it was a Soviet trick or deceit. Time and China has confirmed the first crack in the Soviet Empire and now, with the speeches of Tito and Berlinguer of Italy, it seems clear that communism will proceed on nationalist lines and Russia has lost forever her dominance of communism.

Plainly, the other countries of the world interested in marxism are going to find their own road to their communist heaven. The parallel to the same tendency in the Christian world is striking and perhaps inevitable given the fact marxism is also a religion to its believers.

Clearly, nature desires and insists on variety and independent thought in all things. It is most interesting to read of the heresy in Berlinguer's speech when he said that Italy would have a mixed economy. To old-line communists, this is like suggesting the devil be inducted into the church. The further intimation that communism be made democratic by Berlinguer is the last straw.

It remains to be seen if the leopard can change its spots and the world will watch to see developments in Italy and France. But of separatism, there is, I think, no doubt. Tito has shown it can be maintained and so has China and the spectre of a world monolithic horror of communism is very much less to be feared now. The necessity in nature for independent thought has once again unmistakably been asserted. Communism will never be the same again. Imperialism has suffered a final defeat. — M. P. Paine, 3620 Quadra Street.

CIA Behind It

The Times of July 19 quotes from the Manchester Guardian of how the communists are now free to develop in their own way in their own countries. The communist manifesto stating this decision says: "The policies of imperialism and neo-colonialism and all forms of oppression and exploitation remain the main dangers to peace . . ." The Guardian then wonders what the Soviets said to Hungary and Czechoslovakia in 1956 and 1968.

I didn't hear the words in question but some Ottawa ladies who went to the USSR embassy were told that West Germany was full of CIA men disguised as tourists, but planning a coup in Czechoslovakia in 1968. The Czechs had only to look back two years to a CIA-directed coup that prevented a legal election in Greece and substituted an island of torture. Only a few years earlier than that there was the CIA-engineered coup in Indonesia where probably at least half a million people were massacred because they were communists.

I don't know what the CIA bosses said to Allende before they destroyed his legally-elected Marxist government, but I know his last word to them. Already wounded, he crept to his office, took a bazooka, and scored a direct hit on one of the tanks attacking the palace. Perhaps the Guardian would investigate the arrests and torture still going on in Chile and covertly sponsored by a great imperialist power. — Frances Wilcox, 820 Cook Street.

A Masterpiece

Bill Walker's column of July 13, ludicrously headed Canada's Taiwan Stand a Breach of Ethics, was a masterpiece of ignorance and intolerance.

Perhaps the best clue to Walker's thinking was the statement: "Canada gained absolutely nothing by this intrusion . . ."

I would suggest to your columnist that a nation which bases its decisions on the "gain" involved is morally bankrupt. In this case, at least, and completely contrary to your headline, the Trudeau government did the honorable and correct thing (unless it since changed its mind).

To recognize the remnants of Chiang Kai-shek's discredited regime as being China is to be an accomplice to a grotesque fraud. And that is the exact position Lord Killanin and his supporters, contrary to the UN stance, are in.

Who, really, is playing politics, Mr. Walker?

Incidentally, I have yet to hear of any tears being shed for the real victims of the imposition of Chiang's rule on Taiwan, the native Taiwanese. These are truly the forgotten people.

On another Olympic question, Walker seems concerned that Tanzania's withdrawal cancels the anticipated clash between Filbert Bayi and John Walker. As for the other African states he says ". . . it won't matter if they do" (withdraw).

Apparently if you don't have a Bayi on your roster you don't count. There's the true sporting spirit for you.

Mr. Walker, try pretending you are a non-white African, and ask yourself how you would regard a country that legislates you and everyone like you to sub-human status — that denies you the vote, that pays you lower-than-subsistence wage, that occupies 85 per cent of your best land, and does a host of other things to degrade you.

If you still think it "mind-boggling" for such a person to be deeply angered by such a regime, and by a country like New Zealand that lends legitimacy to such a regime, they you are part of the problem. —Peter Sanford, Courtenay.

Pilots and Safety

Hopefully, E. R. Freistadt (Francophones Right, July 17), is a non-pilot. Pilots who strive for professionalism are not reluctant to do anything that promotes safety regardless of how asinine it appears.

We were circling waiting for landing clearances into Tijuana, Mexico. The weather was at minimum and decaying rapidly. Two large Mexican airliners had missed two approaches each. The controller, recognizing the weather and fuel situation, became unnerved. He was the only man on duty and ended up speaking to all aircraft in a mish-mash of Mexican-English. Later in the control tower he apologized. Both Mexican pilots were very intense and confided to us that in future they would speak only English at international airports.

Safety is not a red herring. A pilot has the sole legal and moral responsibility for his craft; a controller advises. If this legal technicality is upset by bilingualism, then who does have the responsibility?

Most aircraft have only one opportunity to broadcast a distress. Could a mayday transmission in French be properly relayed by a unilingual English pilot?

It is time for one international language — any language — for air communication. I am not a bigot. I am a chicken. — Lavonne Huneck, Box 1731, Victoria.

Bondage Bylaw

It would seem that the city cannot control the developers, so have decided to use the owners of so-called heritage homes as a stick to keep the developers down. To exile the heritage homes from other rights of a city homeowner is wrong. Freedom in housing is a Canadian right. A homeowner in Victoria has to make a daily effort to keep things in order. Does the city intend to be ressponsible to keep up the homes, or have some of them a slum future? The old Victoria is gone, new building laws have come into force, but no city bylaw should make a homeowner appear as a bondage owner, because of a heritage housing law. There must be other ways to save some old homes and keep freedom in housing for all. — Mrs. B. Brazil, 676 Battery Street.

Helpless Horses

I know that I am not alone when I express my disgust at the treatment handed out to a bunch of helpless horses, minding their own business in a field in the middle of the night.

This horrible act has to be the lowest form of depravity possible. I only hope that the culprits are caught, and I hope even more that when they are the court will throw the book at them.

It is a great pity that our laws will not permit a judge to sentence them to the same treatment that was meted out to these animals. — Harold Morton, P.O. Box 4223, Station A.

Politician in Touch With Towns

By COLMAN McCARTHY
Washington Post

Last summer, happy at being a human being again after 18 months of exhaustion seeking his party's presidential nomination, Walter Mondale took time out to seek a more personal goal; his own roots.

He traveled to Norway and the village of Mundal, from which his name comes and where his cousins and other kin work today among the farmlands and fjords. Fifty people live in Mundal, from which Mondale's great-grandfather left in 1857.

"I wanted to know how the family was living in Norway today," recalls the returned son, "and I needed to know also about the life of those who left the village over 100 years ago when they came to Minnesota. When I rode the ferry out of Mundal, I saw the same sights my ancestors did when they left for the New World . . . It was an unforgettable feeling for me."

An awareness of roots was probably not among the reasons Jimmy Carter picked Senator Mondale as his running-mate. But for those in Washington and around the country who have come to know the 48-year-old Democrat as an unshowy, reflective and open-minded man, Mondale's revisiting the scenes of the old country was less a groping backwards to see what he escaped from than a look sideways to see if his own identify was in balance. It is not a political asset that will win votes this November, but it is part of a philosophy that they are dealing with the wholeness of a person, not a figure.

Family the Key

Politicians tend to be like tourists with trends—polls are read like maps before a step is taken—but Mondale has spent much of his time in Washington on issues that are felt in the towns and neighborhoods never reached by the trends. He said recently that "in the whole range of human problems, I've dealt with in my 12 years in the Senate — hunger, housing, labor, Indian education, migrant workers, childen, aging—I keep getting back to one thing: the strength of the family. It's such a simple point, it should have been obvious."

In November 1974, Mondale decided that he had a family of his own. After 18 months of banging around the country seeking the presidency, he couldn't spend another two years of pursuit.

"My family life increasingly consisted of a long distance phone call late at night," he wrote in his recent book "The Accountability of Power." After finding out every evening that the kids were fine and his wife was bearing up under the strain of political widowhood, Mondale would try to read before going to bed.

"I can recall more than once becoming so tired that in the process of trying to read a newspaper, I suddenly realized that I hadn't absorbed a single word that I had read . . . I love to ponder ideas, to reflect on them and discuss them with experts and friends, but this was no longer possible."

Avoids Posturing

What was possible was a return to the Senate, a grind that can be sufficiently wearying and frustrating in itself. Mondale has called himself "a moderate Democrat," a "pragmatic, progressive Democrat" and a liberal. Those were apparently options enough for Jimmy Carter. But whatever the labels, Mondale has been one of the few in the Senate to take his work more seriously than himself.

On the Finance Committee, where the loopholes are fashioned and the cameras seldom come, Mondale has avoided useless posturing about "subsidies for the rich" in favor of boning up on the intricacies of tax incentives for child care and working mothers. An observer of the committee says that "unlike some liberals on Finance, Mondale is seldom seen with a staff man whispering into his ear during the crunch of an argument. He is on his own and can think for himself. He has been persuasive."

For someone who has been quietly trying to generate a national sense of compassion toward those at the bottom, Mondale has kept free of rhapsodizing himself with a sense of mission.

As for the so-called "anti-Washington mood," Mondale said wryly in the summer of 1974 when Nixon, Agnew, Ford and Rockefeller were changing jobs: "We have performed miracles for you in Washington. If you don't believe it, consider this: Who else would have given you two presidents or three vice-presidents in two years without even having an election?"

Mondale has critics. But he talks about his own flaws. In 1976, he made a well-publicized speech supporting the Johnson administration's Vietnam policy. Four years later, he told an interviewer that it was "a painful speech . . . I think the worst mistake I've made in public life is to be a slow learner on Vietnam. This has been the most tragic mistake this country's ever made . . . and I share part of that blame, and the record is there. I'm not proud of it."

Something he refuses to have dumped on him as a mistake is his position on busing. Throughout the debate, he has been called Mr. Busing as though he had all but quit the Senate to become a bus driver hauling black kids out of Roxbury. Repeatedly, Mondale has tried to keep the issue focused. Social policy isn't under discussion, he said as early as 1973. "The Congress, to my knowledge, has never voted to require busing. I don't believe I have ever voted to require busing. The sole issue is this: Where the court finds that a school district is discriminating and violating the Constitution of the United States, will it continue to have the power to eliminate that discrimination? It is not a social policy question. It is a question of whether we believe in the Constitution of the United States."

Anchors Are White

Should the Carter-Mondale ticket win in November, the question needing to be answered about the values and the ideas Mondale has been advocating for 12 years in the Senate will be furthered or hindered by the vice-presidency. Will he be accountable to his own power? Nothing of substance can be known for now, though a hint surfaced last week after Mondale passed the tests in Plains, Ga. A journalist friend asked a favor. If the Democrats win and the Mondale family moves the few blocks from its house on Lowell Street to the Naval Observatory, would the vice-president please give a coating of white paint to the two anchors at the observatory's entrance. They were painted black by Nelson Rockefeller. "That's an excellent idea," said Mondale. "White is what they should be. You come over and we'll paint them together."

MONDALE . . . free of trends

Painting anchors white isn't how national reputations get enhanced, but at least it is a way of brightening up the neighborhood. If enhancement matters, it ought to start on the street where a man lives.

Arab Blacklist Has No Place Here

TORONTO STAR
An Editorial

The Arabs' war on Israel seeks to isolate the Jewish state politically, to strangle it economically, and to demean it through a big-budget propaganda campaign.

All this is widely understood. What is not generally recognized is that the Arab bloc is also engaged in introducing the poison of anti-Jewish discrimination into the democracies — including Canada.

This is done mainly through the blacklist of Canadian firms — banks, shipping lines, car makers and brewers — that may be doing business with Israel or with companies that may be dealing with Israel. Or it may simply include Jewish businesses in Canada. A 1969-70 Saudi Arabian blacklist, as made public in Ottawa, ranged from the Bulova Watch Co. and Captain Morgan Rum to the Ford Motor Company, Xerox of Canada and even the Oakqueen Shopping Plaza. Last year's Arab blacklist had more than 140 Canadian firms on it.

This form of intimidation runs against every decent principle that we stand for. As a sovereign nation, we cannot allow any foreign state to dictate to us who can, or must not, do business with whom. When Washington in the '60s tried to tell the Canadian subsidiaries of U.S. firms not to sell their products to the People's Republic of China and to Cuba, our rebuff was prompt and vigorous.

Nor can we allow any bigots abroad to impose their biases on this land. Last November, Ontario Treasurer Darcy McKeough revealed that the provincial government had refused the demand that it change one of its international bankers — who happened to be Jewish — if it hoped to get oil money for the province and for the Ontario Hydro. The demand itself was a racist outrage.

At least on paper, Ottawa seemed to be as forthright as Ontario. Thus, on May 8, 1975, Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau told the House: "This type of practice (Arab boycott) is alien to everything the government stands for and indeed to what, in general, Canadian ethics stands for." Last mid-March, Industry Minister Don Jamieson told MPs the cabinet would be discussing the issue within a fortnight.

But it was all words rather than deeds. The cabinet, in fact, has been dragging its feet. What is needed is unequivocal legislation similar to the web of U.S. regulations that proscribe the Arab boycott and other forms of economic discrimination. Nothing of the kind has yet been presented to the Commons in Ottawa.

Worse, there are signs that government agencies are winking at the Arab boycott. For instance, the Canadian government trade office in Beirut issues a glowing report on the prospects for trade with Iraq, along with information on the need for boycott certificates. It is equally disturbing to see Canadian banks free to issue letters of credit embracing the anti-Jewish boycott provisions.

If the prime minister meant what he said more than 13 months ago, then he has been remiss in not introducing supporting legislation. We as a nation reject discrimination against any Canadian citizen or business on the basis of race, color, religion, sex and national origin. Ottawa should make it clear through legislation — with teeth in it — that it will not tolerate racist pressures on this country.

Court AIB Ruling Triggers Debate

By DOUGLAS FISHER

OTTAWA — The two decisions—the first yes, the second no, are clearcut. And the Supreme Court having ruled, the Trudeau government is relaxing while the Davis government must scramble to legalize its position in the anti-inflation program.

What is not clear-cut are:

(A) How the decisions, plus "the reasons" for them, as expressed by Chief Justice Laskin and interpreted by Justices Ritchie and Beetz, have left the tension and direction of the lines of force between the federal and the provincial governments.

(B) Whether the Laskin court is essentially federally-oriented or neutral vis-a-vis Ottawa and the provinces.

While the court voted seven to two that the federal Anti-Inflation Act was constitutionally valid, it must be emphasized that five of the nine judges did not walk along with the Chief Justice and three of their colleagues (Judon, Spence and Dickson) in broad reasoning in support of the federal act's constitutionality.

That is, Justices Ritchie, Martland and Pigeon could only support the legislation on the basis that it was to meet "a national emergency" and was "temporary in nature".

In his dissent against the approval of the federal law, Justice Beetz (concurred with by Justice Grandpre) also reasoned that if the law had been truly enacted to deal with an extraordinary crisis, he could have supported it as emergency and temporary legislation.

According to the Beetz argument, the "national emergency" was not only undemonstrated, the federal government, through many spokesmen, from the prime minister to the minister of finance, had not really tried to make the emergency case.

Indeed, my reading of both Ritchie and Beetz suggests that these judges feel that Laskin has argued around far too widely to give the federal legislation a credibility beyond the "emergency" argument.

This layman also got the impression from what is there in print that the Laskin "reasons" will bemuse hundreds of present and future students of law with its long, obscure reinterpretations of so many past constitutional cases of both this court and the Privy Council at Westminster.

If, as I take it, the majority of the court could only approve the constitutionality of the law on the basis that it is a temporary measure created by Parliament to meet a national economic crisis, then the question hangs somewhere in the air right now for a litigant with resources and talent: Hasn't the emergency passed? Shouldn't the constitutionality be challenged again, as quickly as possible?

Hasn't the prime minister himself been saying that a deal is being worked out, hopefully to be enacted this fall, which would give organized labor a formal in-put into national economic management?

If one recognized that half the anti-inflation program is about wage control and management, then the prime minister himself is moving to put a key part of the anti-inflation program into a remarkably different context.

Further, the course of public opinion has arguably swung strongly against the efficacy and fairness of the program. This is especially notable as criticism flows from major interest groups. Several of the provinces are coming to life about the federal intrusion on their powers which they supported and which the Supreme Court may now have given a permanent validity.

Most provinces, even Quebec, can probably live with the decision if the reason for it is plainly "a national and temporary emergency." But if the decision is interpreted along the Laskin line of arguments as being justified on the basis of a mere, serious national concern over inflation or in large part a mere extension of federal powers in the subject areas of fiscal and monetary policy and under the constitutional power "head" of trade, then Quebec and several other provinces shall have to stand and fight.

If I'm roughtly right in my reading of the situation, the court's decision is not so much a landmark in our constitutional history as the crack of the starter's pistol in a fresh debate over how extensive Ottawa's economic powers ought to be.

Cultural Turmoil in U.S. Is Not the Canadian Style

By ROBERT FULFORD

Those of us who spent our youth digging into the hidden recesses of American culture must have had some crazy idea that we could find there the secret of our own existence. We must have believed that this monolith that towered over us could somehow be explained, if only we found out enough about what was going on deep inside it — tense modern jazz, obscure forms of abstract painting, Woody Guthrie Dust Bowl songs, Beat Generation prose, the tortured novels of Nathanael West, the bitter essays of James Baldwin, the jokes of Eisenhower-age comics such as Lenny Bruce.

We weren't hooked on mass culture, as it's since come to be called. The things that interested us were not the most popular forms of art but the most separate, special, neglected. What we wanted to know about was the dark underside of the United States, the American born in feverish immigrant ghettos and hidden black communities. Our lives were filled with — and, in some ways, crushed by — U.S. movies and later U.S. television. What we wanted to know was what lay behind all that.

* * *

So we dug around down there, and as our curiosity turned into an obsession we found some of the great heroes of our lives. What we didn't know then, and have only dimly understood in the years since, was that these heroes and their work would eventually become part of the everyday commerce of America.

Surely this has been the most startling movement in American culture during this era—the incredible rush up-from-under, the transformation of private special tastes into mass taste. At the 200th birthday of the United States this is what impresses (and sometimes appalls) me most as the symbol of America's unending renewal of itself.

I see it sometimes in bald psychological terms. Those things that once existed so furtively were the cultural subconscious. The conscious mind of America was middlebrow culture — Glenn Miller and Cary Grant and the Saturday Evening Post and Ed Sullivan.

So what has happened now — say, in the last 10 years — is that the American subconscious has replaced its old consciousness. Woody Guthrie, a couple of decades later, is reborn as Bob Dylan and captures 50 million listeners. Lenny Bruce becomes a Hollywood movie. James Baldwin's insights are on everyone's lips. The jazz beat, in its denatured rock form, fills every teenager's ears. Action Painting has come and gone, leaving its collectors rich. Novels such as E. L. Doctorow's Ragtime — which would have been cult objects a generation ago — now dominate the bestseller lists with their anarchic, intransigent criticism of U.S. history.

My own faltering awareness of these issues began sometime around 1945 which by coincidence was also when it began for America. The United States, of course, was always the most self-conscious of nations, because it was created in one careful stroke rather than allowed to evolve over centuries. Then, in the years after World War II, it began a period of agonizing introspection, as its new-found and not entirely desired world-power status conflicted with its traditional existence as an independent and isolated republic.

* * *

That titanic world-historical event produced for the United States a period of self-psycho-analysis which isn't over yet. Each terrible event of recent years, from the black riots to Viet Nam to Watergate, has been another episode in a painful process of self-examination. The United States, more than any other nation in history, has looked itself in the face and been displeased by what it saw.

The process of self-analysis has shaken, reorganized and finally overturned U.S. culture. The result is the anarchy that faces anyone who looks at serious American art today. The United States is having its nervous breakdown in public.

DYLAN . . . 50 million listen

That anarchy is the shape the U.S. imagination has taken in our own time, in response to the world the Americans confront. The age of Henry James, the age when Mark Twain hid his obsessions, vanished forever when total power over human life descended like a black cloud on the United States in 1945. The revelation of every desire and dream became the ruling motive of American art.

This is what lies behind the emblems of U.S. culture that reach us — the boundless proud egotism of Norman Mailer's writing, the titanic sculptures of Claes Oldenburg and Robert Smithson, the endless orgasms of a thousand rock musicians, the hysterical novels of Philip Roth and Saul Bellow.

Americans, as it turns out, are most satisfied when acting out their fantasies. Which is what convinces me that those of us who once looked to the United States for guidance were gravely mistaken.

Canada and the United States are psychically distinct, like night and day, and the American bicentennial seems as good a time as any to notice this fact. Canadians may love the United States, we may even use its mass culture as if it were our own, but we cannot be Americans and cannot absorb the American style. Which is why Canadian jazz is almost always bloodless, and Canadian actors — when they perform American plays — are an embarrassment.

* * *

The American style is to reveal, the Canadian style is to hide. Where Americans display their subsconscious, making this act the main task of a whole artistic generation, we devote equal effort to concealing whatever is at the bottom of our collective psyche.

Occasionally we see our hidden selves, briefly, as if by a stroke of lightning, in some beautifully made piece of art — like Claude Jutra's film, Mon Oncle Antoine, or Marian Engel's novel, Bear. But for the most part we are silent about what obsesses us. Our subconscious is locked forever inside the evasions of Mackenzie King's diary — or its equivalent in every newspaper office, publishing house and artist's studio in Canada. It may emerge someday, in some other circumstances, but when it does it will be altogether different from the subconscious that the Americans, with mixed pride and shame, so exuberantly show to themselves and to the world.

Mormon Will Rejected

BERKELEY, Calif. (UPI) — The University of California, which stood to net millions under the so-called "Mormon" will of Howard Hughes, says its own examiners rejected the document's validity.

The university said Thursday findings of its document examiners "do not support the claim, that the alleged will was written by Howard Hughes."

Donald L. Reidhaar, legal adviser for the university board of regents, said university attorneys "will continue to follow developments in connection with the Hughes estate."

Sherwood Morrill, Sacramento, Calif., and Lucile Lacy, Houston, Tex., both recognized documents experts, carried out the study for the university which said it was withdrawing from any further efforts to establish authenticity of the will.

Padded Toilet Seats Springboard to Fame

MIAMI (UPI)— The small sign reads, "Be kind to your bottom, we got 'em."

For five generations the family of Monroe Phillips handled the routine chores of unstopping clogged drains and replacing worn out sinks.

Then, about seven years ago, a salesman for a specialty firm called and plumber Phillips was catapulted into the padded toilet seat business.

"It just took off right away. I never did any advertising beyond that little sign in the window," said Phillips.

Phillips, 58, said he has been in the plumbing business for 45 years. "But it was the first time I ever heard of people giving other people toilet seats for Christmas.

"Last year I filled mail orders all over the country," he said. "People are funny. They'll buy whether they need it or not, just to say they have one," he said.

Padded toilet seats come in all styles and prices, from a low of about $15 to as much as $200. The cheapest are covered with vinyl, the most expensive with naugahyde.

There's even one with pornographic drawings which Phillips calls "my X-rated model."

He had to take that one out of his display window. The principal of the nearby grade school in suburban North Miami objected that the children were stopping to stare on their way home from classes.

"The hippies buy that model like crazy," Phillips said.

Phillips doesn't handle fur-lined toilet seats. "I leave that to Abercrombie and Fitch. Most of my customers are working people."

He said there's a mink-trimmed toilet seat on the market which costs well over $200.

Phillips admits the recession made a serious dent in his padded toilet seat business and there's lots of competition now. "Even the department stores are selling them."

He only sold about 500 padded seats last year, compared to thousands in pre-recession times. "When people are pressed, instead of paying $19 for a padded seat, they'll likely go back to spending $8 for a conventional wooden seat."

Padded toilet seats are more popular with women than with men, Phillips said, "because they can decorate them. They even come with embroidery inlaid in the vinyl or naugahyde. You can have them monogrammed, or with tennis rackets if you are a tennis enthusiast, or race horses, or to illustrate whatever your hobby may be."

The plastic covering is lined with about an inch of foam rubber. "They never wear out. They last a lifetime." Phillips said.

Strange 'Clicks' In Harris Tape

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The Harris trial defence, fighting to brand phoney a tape recorded "communique" from the Symbionese Liberation Army to prevent its acceptance as evidence, produced a fraudulent version of their own.

A Watergate expert said the SLA recording had more strange "clicks" and suspicious sounds than any he had examined since the Nixon tapes.

At a hearing Thursday, with the jury out of the room, defence attorneys for William and Emily Harris played a reconstructed tape of the "communique" left at a radio station in which the Harrises and Miss Hearst allegedly gave their bitter reactions to te deaths of six SLA colleagues.

"This is Teko speaking," came the voice of William Harris, using his SLA name.

'Yolanda, Tania (his wife and Miss Hearst) and I extend profound feelings of revolutionary love and solidarity to the United States Marine Corps and the National Guard."

Then lawyers played the tape the prosecution says is the original — and the defence contends was doctored.

In it, Harris extends revolutionary solidarity to 'General Field Marshal Cabrilla and all the soldiers of hte United People's Liberation Army."

The defence argued that the same splicing techniques that put the 'Marine Corps" into Harris' mouth could have been used to produce the prosecution's version of the tape.

The argument received support from electronics expert John McKnight of Magnetic Reference Laboratories in Mountainview, Calif.

McKnight, who was on the panel that examined the partially erased tapes from the Nixon White House for federal court Judge John Sirica, testified there are more unexplained "clicks on this tape than any other I have examined other than the Watergate tape."

"I can't tell you absolutely what caused the clicks, but I can't think of any other reason than splicing," he said.

He said the fact that the clicks all fall between words and sentences — highly unlikely if they were caused by recorder malfunction — was particularly suspicious.

WHALES RUN AGROUND

FORT MYERS, Fla. (AP) — Marine scientists are trying to identify a mysterious ailment that drove five whales to strand themselves onto a Gulf of Mexico beach. Meanwhile, boaters are keeping watch over the rest of the herd to keep them from doing the same.

Five false killer whales, porpoise-like mammals weighing 1,000 to 2,000 pounds, swam ashore Thursday at Captiva Island near here.

The Florida Marine Patrol, helped by local townsfolk armed with towels, buckets and beach umbrellas, worked 12 hours in shallow water to save four of the whales by keeping them upright, rubbing them with lanolin and pouring water over them.

Dr. Daniel Odell of the University of Miami performed an autopsy on the one whale that could not be saved.

Odell said the animal's intestines and stomach were completely devoid of food and revealed the presence of a parasite. He said conditions were similar in 25 spinner dolphins that died in a beaching 50 miles farther north last week.

By Thursday night, at least 25 of the whales in the offshore herd had been coaxed through Captiva Pass and into the Gulf of Mexico. It was hoped they would survive in the open sea.

The four whales which survived the beaching were loaded by a 15-man crew onto stretchers and put aboard a 75-foot boat for the first leg of a trip to Sea World, a marine attraction in Orlando, for study and treatment.

Dr. Rorbert Schimpff, a pathologist from the University of Florida health centre in Gainesville, said he was still puzzled over the ailment that caused the huge mammals to go into shore.

He said the problem might be a parasitic infection of the sinus or inner ear, which might affect the animals' sonar apparatus, or an infection of the nervous system.

Court Acquits RCMP Officer Of Assault

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — RCMP Constable Leaurent Labrech, 23, of Terrace, was acquitted in provincial court Thursday on charges of assault causing bodily harm and possession of a restricted firearm.

Judge E. J. Cronin said he could not convict the officer on the basis of testimony heard during the three-day trial.

Charges were laid after an incident on May 8 on Highway 16, 10 miles east of here involving the officer in an agrument with George Nylan, 20, of Prince Rupert.

Judge Cronin said he was not impressed with Nylan and said his performance on the stand demonstrated that he was a liar.

The issue of drag-racing on the night of the incident played an integral part in the trial because it became obvious during testimony that people in the area had been participating in the races, Judge Cronin said.

He said conflicting testimony regarding actual involvement in the races was definitely an attempt to cover-up. He said the credibility of testimony given by other witnesses was in question.

Sam Parnell, 22, of Prince Rupert, testified Wednesday he had been racing with Nylan immediately before the incident. Nylan testified that he had arrived on the scene only few minutes bofore the incident.

Judge Cronin said a peace officer is a peace officer 24 hours a day, regardless of whether he is on duty, and is entitled to carry out any reasonable investigation.

Labrech testified Thursday that he had been driving east toward Terrace when a car approaching abruptly made a U-turn in front of him, forcing him to stop.

He said he got out of the car and confronted the driver.

Labrech said he showed Nylan his badge and Nylan appeared satisfied with it but "the approach of his friends changed his attitude completely — he was arrogant . . . and didn't want to hand his driver's licence over."

He said he didn't feel secure with people crowding around and the lack of uniform seemed to lessen his authority as a police officer. He went back to his car to get his pistol, which he said he takes with him when taking trips outside Terrace.

Labrech said that he intended to show the crowd his gun to show the he was not just an ordinary citizen.

He put the gun in his back pocket and was leaning on Nylan's vehicle when he said he felt a tug on his arm. Acting by reflex, he said, he hit Nylan across the base of the throat.

Labrech has a black belt in karate.

Crown counsel Michael Fullmer said if Nylan had wanted to start a fight with the officer he would have punched the constable instead of tugging on his arm.

A fight followed and Labrech said Nylan tried to pull him off balance while Nylan was on the ground. He said the crowd began closing in and his only though twas to get away safely.

Labrech said he drove with his wife, Brenda, toward Terrace and along the road they were intercepted by RCMP officers who searched the car.

He said he was aware of what the officers were looking for but gave the pistol to his wife and said nothing.

Later, Mrs. Labrech admitted hiding the gun in a shoebox at home so that if it was found investigating officers would not connect it with the incident. She said her husband told her to hide it and she was aware he did not have a permit to carry the derringer.

Judge Cronin said concealing the weapon was not an offence under the Criminal Code because it did not change the law exempting police officers from having to have a permit while carrying a gun in the line of duty.

He said any disciplinary action taken against Labrech it would have to come from the RCMP.

"I am satisifed he was carrying the gun for the purpose of his duties," said Judge Cronin.

Soviet Officials May Meet Press

MOSCOW (Reuter) — Foreign journalists may have direct contacts with Soviet officials instead of going through the foreign ministry press department, under a government decree published this week. At the European security conference in Helsinki last year, 35 signatory countries promised to ease contacts between their officials and foreign correspondents.

WATER FIRST, THEN BUILD

A bylaw that would ban developers from building until they hook into Sidney's water ing.

Mayor Peter Malcolm said the bylaw would end the issuance of building permits for houses that would depend on well water, which the mayor said is not always a dependable source.

Union And BCR Seek Help

VANCOUVER (CP) — With months of disagreement standing between them, the B.C. Railway and the United Transportation Union agreed on common action Thursday—requesting that a board of arbitration be convened as soon as possible.

Glen Bowles, general chairman of the UTU, and Ted Teichman, labor relations manager for the crown-owned railway, sent a telegram Thursday to Owen B. Shime, the Toronto labor relations consultant appointed by the B.C. government to hand down a binding arbitration award in the dispute.

The contract expired July 31, 1975, and since that time railway operations and negotiations have been on an on-again, off-again, basis.

Bowles and Teichman told Shime the delay in convening the arbitration board "is members" and they request causing unrest among union "that the board of arbitration makes every effort to convene forthwith."

Shime was responsible for handling binding arbitration that awarded a new contract to three other groups of union employees on the railway — the Teamsters, operating engineers and maintenance of way employees.

Central stumbling block in negotiations between the UTU and the railway has been the union's request for overtime on a daily basis, rather than on the current mileage basis.

Company spokesman Hugh Armstrong said Thursday that enginemen belonging to the Canadian Union of Transportation Employees currently are paid overtime after 100 hours worked in a two-week period. He said the railway was prepared to offer the UTU workers a similar agreement.

Armstrong said the company's last offer represented a 32-per-cent increase in a two-year term, while the union offer had declined to about 60 per cent including fringe benefits. Base rate for non-operating workers under the last contract was $5.06 an hour.

The union staged a work slowdown in May which was interpreted as strike action by the provincial labor relations board. Layoffs took place during the slowdown because of the shutdown of freight services on the railway.

The railway returned to full operations about the middle of last month.

ESQUIMALT'S UPLANDS

Do you really want your privacy without driving for miles? Do you really want low taxes? Do you really want a large lot 210x85, that's easy care and only requires cutting the lawn and tending to a few flowers (almost all evergreens?) Do you really want something special in a no-step home? You can not see anything from the road because of the large cedar hedge that took 25 years to grow and the living room window, etc., faces this fantastic back yard, so a drive-by is deceiving. If you REALLY want something special, come and see it for yourself this Saturday.

Trustees Back Chairman Ross

BRICE

BAIRD

Three Greater Victoria School Board trustees Thursday came to the defence of chairman William Ross.

They were reacting to criticisms and calls for his resignation by Leah Brown and John Young, former principal of Campbell River High School.

Trustee Susan Brice said Brown and Young "have a history of confrontation with school boards in general" and in a attempt to receive publicity for their views "have chosen this very common and, in my opinion, tedious route, namely that of flamboyantly demanding the resignation of a politician."

Trustee Peter Bunn said Ross has been a first-class chairman in a difficult time who has not overstepped his powers, has conducted himnelf well and "has represented the school board with distinction."

Trustee Janet Baird said "I do not believe we could have had a more honest, open and dedicated chairman. He has maintained his composure and his ability to think clearly in spite of verbal abuse, misconstruded facts and frequent inconsequential prodecural wrangles."

Ross himself challenged Brown to run for election in November and said he would be delighted to raise issues she had brought up then.

Brown called or Ross' resignation Wednesday because of his general attitude and because she thought he was overstepping his powers as chairman.

Four Radiotelescopes Locate Embryo Stars

WASHINGTON (WP) — Using a worldwide link of four radiotelescopes, astronomers have peered deep into the interior of two giant clouds to see embryo stars 100 million years before they are born.

These telescopes have provided the earliest look science has ever had at the birth of the stars that dot our universe.

Astronomers are now looking at what previously appered only as big, blurred water-vapor clouds 1,000 light years away (one light year equals 6 trillion miles) and seeing at least 100 embryo stars in each cloud.

The diameter of each of these embryo stars could be triple the 93-million-mile distance from earth to the sun, said Dr .Herbert Friedman, director of the Naval Research Laboratory here.

One of these embryo stars gives light readings as bright as the sun, even though it is 3 billion times farther away from earth, indicating that it is hundreds of trillions times brighter than the sun.

Yet it would be impossible for anything to be hot enough to produce such brightness. Indeed, Friedman said, the embryo stars could be as cold as minus 200 degrees Fahrenheit and no hotter than 1,300 degrees Fahrenheit. The sun at its centre has a temperature of 15 million degrees.

The intense brightness of the embryo stars is caused not by heat, but by the concentration of all their energy into one narrow band, a phenomenon known as maser, which stands for microwave amplification by stimulated emission of radiation.

Masers are concentrated bands of radiation, as lasers are concentrated bands of light

Although scientists long have believed masers are the precursors of stars, this is the first time they have been seen in the centre of the big clouds that are the cradles in which stars are formed, said Dr. Kenneth J. Johnson, who scheduled the experiments at the Naval Research Laboratory

He still is analyzing data coming back from the May 6 look at the two primordial clouds in the constellation Aquila, the Eagle.

Getaway Drive In Sewer

NICE, France (UPI) — Baffled investigators say the thieves who pulled off a spectacular $10 million bank heist made their getaway through the city's sewer system in a pickup van.

A police official said the burglairds drove a van along the underground banks of the Paillon River — over which Nice is built — from the 25-foot tunnel they dug to the safe deposit vault of the Societe Generale Bank.

"We are quite certain they drove a pickup van almost a kilometer (0.6 miles) along the underground road used by the sanitation department," he said.

In what is being called the "caper of the century," the burglars tunneled into the bank's main vault that was not protected by an alarm. Working at their leisure during the weekend, they munched bread and sipped wine while ransacking 400 safe-deposit boxes.

"We're found rubber hip boots, acetylene bottles, a rubber boat and other equipment which we hope will turn up a clue that will help to identify the thieves," Police Commissioner Jacques Bresson said at a news conference.

There were also numerous shoe prints, including those of an tiny pair of tennis shoes, raising the question whether they belonged to a small woman, a child or a midget.

But officials acknowledged they were far from cracking the case.

An official in Bresson's office said, "I'll be frank. It was spectacular. We have nothing to go on but at least we now have some debris we can rummage through for a clue."

The official said 25 super sleuths had arrived from Paris to join in the hunt as well as experts from Italy where tunnels have been used successfully in bank thefts.

Persistent Holdup Men Out-Gunned

NEW YORK (UPI) — Two gunmen tried to hold up a pair of FBI agents on their way to work today and wound up in the hospital with gunshot wounds, the FBI reported.

One of the gunmen was in critical condition and the other was listed in serious condition at Lenox Hill Hospital in Manhattan, police said. Their identities have not been released.

"At about 7:30 a.m. an attempt was made to rob two special agents of the FBI while they were on their way to work," An FBI spokesman said. "They were approached by two males on 69th Street between First and Second Avenues.

"One of them drew a handgun and demanded money," the spokesman said. "The agents identified themselves, but the subjects persisted in demanding money, waving a gun at one of the agents. The second agent drew his gun, wounding both of the suspects."

Police said they have recovered a handgun from the scene.

The FBI said the men would probably be charged with assaulting a federal officer. Police said they would charge the men with attempted robbery.

Chinese Well Prepared for Mao's Death

Manchester Guardian

HONG KONG — Party officials and even ordinary people throughout China are now so well prepared for Chairman Mao Tse-tung's teath that the political effect is almost as if he were already gone, according to recent visitors to China.

The evidence is considerable that, as one diplomatic China-watcher puts it, "The party has removed him from politics and put him up on a shelf to die."

This militates against theories that his death, when it comes, will be a signal for another battle between so-called radical and moderate elements, or that China is now in a confused inter-regnum because of the state of his health.

What it suggests instead is an effort to continue normally with the business of governing China. It suggests that the party is concerned above all with coping with the problem of transition raised by the disappearance of a whole generation of founding leaders and not just Mao.

The deaths of Chou En-lai, and last week of Marshal Chu Teh, have served to emphasize to the Chinese people that the end for Mao, too, cannot be far away. But there have been more deliberate efforts to prepare the party and people.

Photographs of Mao in magazines and newspapers have stressed his age, his frailty and his physical disabilities, whereas previous photographs were carefully shot and selected to suggest health and vigor. The announcement recently that Mao would no longer meet foreign visitors was, no doubt, made for practical reasons, but its domestic political impact must have been calculated as well.

The Chinese are no more likely than foreigners to believe that the ban has been imposed because Mao is "busy." There are also indications that there have been briefings on his impending death at low-level meetings throughout the country.

Recent visitors say cadres at every level are well aware that Mao is likely to die soon, and that he is no longer functioning politically. One interpreter told the foreigner to whom he was assigned, "It is very difficult for us to believe that very soon our beloved leader will not be with us."

It can be speculated that, as the country is being prepared for his death, Mao has been "disconnected" at the highest political level.

The removal earlier this year of his three women interpreters can certainly be seen in this way. The three were far more than just his interpreters to foreigners. They were also his interpreters for many Chinese, since it requires a specialist to understand Mao's thick accent, complicated by the speech defects of senility and the results of a possible stroke.

Recent visitors also note a very business-as-usual attitude among officials and cadres and, with ordinary people, a certain political weariness that has been labelled campaign fatigue.

"Whatever emotionalism there was in the political struggle or was excited by the death of Chou, has now been drained away," one recent visitor said. "One gets the feeling that even the death of Mao will not revive it."

Argentina Military Elated Over Slaying of Santucho

By JOANNE OMANG
The Washington Post

BUENOS AIRES—The death of Marxist guerrilla leader Roberto M. Santucho has dealt Argentina's extreme left a blow comparable only to the 1967 slaying in Bolivia of Cuban revolutionary Ernesto "Che" Guevara, according to military leaders here.

They were openly jubilant over the deaths Monday of Santucho, 39, and his top deputy Jose Urteaga in a suburban apartment house shootout that left at least eight persons dead. Another two leaders of Santucho's People's Revolutionary Army, ERP by its Spanish initials, were unofficially reported to have died the same day along with three others in a separate encounter.

"I thought it would take 18 months, maybe two years after March 24," said a high official, referring to the day the army took power here, "but it's just matter of a few months now. Really, they've been totally dismembered by this."

The army had been fighting the ERP guerrillas in the mountains of Tucuman Province since February, 1975. Their entry into what had been an ineffective effort by national police hastened the apparent linking up of the ERP and a non-Marxist group, the Montoneros, who had been the leftist wing of Juan D. Peron's political movement. Army dissatisfaction with what they saw as half-hearted effort against the guerrillas by Peron's widow Isabel, who succeeded him as president, was one of the factors that brought on the coup against her government.

The terrorist threat has been used to justify a wide range of stiff military security measures, arrests and interrogations that have led to charges of repression from some groups. At the same time, right-wing death squads allegedly avenging terrorist murders have killed an estimated 119 persons since the coup, while terrorists have killed at least 79 police and government officials.

Santucho's death is certain to lessen the pressure on President Jorge Videla from rightist extremists within the armed forces and the police.

Mine Safe Despite Gold Dip

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia's newest mine in which gold is a significant product is in no danger of closing due to sharply lower bullion prices, says Don McLeod, president of Northair Mines.

He warned, however, that "if the price breaks below $100 an ounce, we would have to sharpen our pencils.

"We have no problem operating down to the $100 level."

McLeod said that if gold fell below $100, Northair would cut back on tonnage and increase the grade of ore mined.

Plus factors for Northair, he said, are its reserves of lead, zinc and silver ore; and the location of additional higher-grade tonnage at the mine. The new tonnage is still in the "indicated" stage due to the preliminary nature of the work done, and is not yet included in reserves.

The only other B.C. mine with an important gold output, Western Mines' Buttle Lake operation, is also not dependent on gold prices for its survival.

Trading on the Vancouver Sotck Exchange has been little affected by the falling gold price as few companies had been making a concentrated effort in looking for gold.

Two of the better-known prospects of recent months, Belmoral Mines and Carolin Mines, are both weaker in light trading.

WHOLESALE SALES UP

OTTAWA (CP) — Sales by wholesale merchants in May were estimated at $4.495 billion, up 5.3 per cent over May, 1975.

Tobacco, confectionery and soft drinks in the consumer goods category were up by 49.7 per cent in May over the same month in 1975.

Among industrial trades goods, a significant increase of 17.6 per cent was noted in sales of lumber and some other construction materials and supplies.

Wholesale inventories for the month were valued at $7 billion, up 9.9 per cent over May, 1975.

Steel Will Come Through Panama

VANCOUVER (CP) —Construction industry spokesmen say the 5,000 tons of steel due to arrive here in November via the Panama Canal will be followed by many similar shipments as the industry combats rising rail freight rates by using ships to bring in domestic steel.

The decision to turn to ships followed a meeting between members of the British Columbia construction association, steel manufacturers and the railways.

The railways have said rates to ship steel here will increase 12 per cent to $3.72 a hundred pounds, beginning Oct. 1.

George Clayton, chairman of the association's freight rates committee, said the railways came back with a counter-offer of six per cent but were told they "Had already priced themselves out of the market."

The B.C. market imports about one million tons of basic steel a year — 30 to 40 per cent of it from domestic suppliers such as Dominion Foundries and Steel Ltd. and Steel Company of Canada in Hamilton, Ont., and Algoma Steel in Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.

Clayton said that if the new rate comes into effect it would mean railways have increased their rates for steel by 68 per cent during an 18-month period.

He said that to move a 70-ton rail car of steel next October will cost $5,208 — an increase of 232 per cent from seven years ago, while a November marine shipment would cost under $2.50 a hundredweight or about $50 a ton.

The rail rate increases have meant freight costs take a greater portion of the value of steel, said Clayton, adding it now takes 28 per cent compared with 22 per cent in January, 1973.

He said the idea of using marine freight services, via the Panama Canal, has been endorsed by his 200-member association and the idea is of interest to other B.C. industries like mining and forestry.

Great Lakes Vetoes Hudson Bay Purchase

TORONTO (CP(— Hudson Bay Mining and Smelting Co. Ltd., Toronto, has been advised by Great Lakes Power Corp., Toronto, that Great Lakes willnot complete its purchase of Hudson Bay's 35.6 per cent common-share holdings in and debentures of Western Decalta Petroleum Ltd., Calgary.

A spokesman for Hudson Bay said the purchase was conditional on Great Lakes and Western Decalta reaching terms for the acquisition by Western Decalta of all outstanding shares of Great Lakes' wholly-owned subsidiary, Brascan Resources, Ltd., Toronto.

Great Lakes advised Hudson Bay that the major reason for its decision not to proceed with the purchase was that acquisition of Brascan Resources by Western Decalta could not be completed upon mutually satisfactory terms.

The total purchase would have been worth about $36.2 million or $8.80 a share.

IMPERIAL EYES COAL FACILITY

EDMONTON (CP) —Imperial Oil Ltd. plans to start drilling for oil and gas off the east coast by 1978 and is considering coal mining in Alberta in the next decade, according to D. K. McIvor, Imperial executive vice-president.

"We hope we will have the ability to drill off the Atlantic coast by 1978," he told a news conference, adding that the Laborador coast "looks promising."

Imperial has been conducting seismic work on its 25 million acres off the east coast since 1970.

McIvor said Imperial is in the process of assessing its various coal reserves in Alberta, especially in the Judy Creek region.

Imperial has "serious intent" to mine coal in Alberta, he said, and is studying the coal policy announced recently by energy minister Don Getty.

Zeller Takeover Almost in Bag

By JEFF CARRUTHERS
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The federal cabinet Thursday failed to make a decision on the proposal by U.S.-controlled Macleod Stedman Ltd. of Winnipeg to take-over control of Zeller's Ltd. of Montreal, thereby virtually assuring the success of a competitive bid by Fields Stores Ltd. of Vancouver.

Justice Minister Ronald Basford, MP for Vancouver Centre, confirmed at the break-up of the regular weekly cabinet meeting that no decision had been taken, or could be taken, in time to meet Macleod Stedman's self-imposed Thursday afternoon deadline for obtaining Canadian government approval of its take-over bid under the Foreign Investment Review Act.

Basford said he thinks that Fields take-over, which should now finally be approved by a U.S. appeals court and the bankruptcy trustee for bankrupt W. T. Grant Co. of New York which holds a controlling interest in Zeller's, will be good for Fields, Zeller's and Canada.

Basford said both Fields and Zeller's are aggressive companies and should be good for each other. He also thought it was good that the national retail outlet was staying in Canadian hands.

The remarks assume that Macleod Stedman, a subsidiary of Gambles Canada Ltd. of Winnipeg which in turn is owned by Camble-Skogma Inc. of Minneapolis, will in fact drop out of the take-over battle for Zeller's, as it promised, or that failing that, the U.S. appeals court will confirm a previous bankruptcy court decision to accept the $32.7-million offer from Fields for the Zeller's shares owned by bankrupt W. T. Grant Co., despite the higher $35-million offer from Macleod Stedman.

The Macleod Stedman take-over proposal was originally rejected by the trustee of bankrupt W. T. Grant Co. of New York because it required Foreign Investment Review Agency approval.

FIRA had informed Macleod Stedman that based on the original take-over application, Industry, Trade and Commerce Minister Donald Jamieson would have to recommend the take-over be disallowed.

Reportedly one reason for the initial decision to recommend disallowance was a Gambles Canada refusal to consider increasing Canadian ownership in its operations in Canada.

Subsequent representations by Macleod Stedman to FIRA reportedly did not change Industry Minister Jamieson's mind about disallowing the proposed take-over.

But Mr. Basford indicated that no formal recommendation from FIRA was before the federal cabinet on Thursday, thereby making a formal decision impossible, despite the fact that the matter was on the busy cabinet agenda for that day.

In light of the Thursday deadline for FIRA approval set by Macleod Stedman, the lack of decision was just as effective as a disallowance, at least in the mind of Mr. Basford, who admitted he prefers the Fields take-over.

The lack of a decision was expected at least a week before and was further assured by Industry Minister Jamieson's absence from Ottawa and from the cabinet meeting Thursday.

Normally, the Industry Minister attends the cabinet meeting at which an important take-over decision is to be made.

A spokesman in the Prime Minister's Office said that there is only one more major cabinet meeting schedule this month next Thursday, before the government takes its traditional August holidays.

The Foreign Investment Review Agency refused any comment on the lack of a decision by Cabinet Thrusday.

Right Royal Rough Ride!

BROMONT, Que. — The Queen, visiting the Olympic equestrian site here Thursday, got a bouncy, swerving ride over the cross-country course for the three-day equestrian event, and then watched Princess Anne do her dressage portion of the competition.

There was a hush as the princess rode her mount, Goodwill, through the exacting course. Her parents and thousands of spectators gasped as the horse muffed one change of pace, but Anne's average score of 91.25 was considered fair by some experts.

When she finished, the crowd gave her an enthusiastic ovation.

Earlier, the Queen met Prince Philip at the competition site where he had been carrying out his duties as president of the International Equestrian Federation.

The prince passed up a four-wheel-drive vehicle with the royal standard which had been prepared for the group and took the Queen and Prince Andrew on a tour of the 18-mile cross-country course in his own jeep.

A Bureaucratic Nightmare Left This Family Starving

VANCOUVER (CP) — Monhini O'Toole, 23, formerly of Ontario, says a series of bureaucratic nightmares in British Columbia has left her family poor and undernourished for the past two months.

Her husband Patrick, 27, has had multiple scerosis for five of the six years they have been married and he's spent the last two years confined to a wheelchair and unable to work.

On an Ontario doctor's orders, the parents and their daughter Aria, 5, packed into their van in mid-May and drove here to live in a milder climate.

After some searching they rented a house in Surrey.

They had medical plan coverage in Ontario, but in B.C., they are not eligible for a handicapped persons grant from the provincial government until Aug. 1.

Mrs. O'Toole said she only wants adequate funds to take care of the family until they become eligible for the handicapped persons grant.

Until they are part of that program they are entitled only to the basic welfare coverage, a grant for rent and possibly some extra for special diets.

"We're both underweight because we haven't had enough food," O'Toole said in an interview. "The only healthy one here is our daughter."

His six-foot one-inch frame has dwindled to 100 pounds due to both illness and lack of food.

Mrs. O,Toole said that since she spoke out Wednesday, she has added $20 to the $3 that remained for the month's funds by borrowing from a person at a local church group. And after a reporter's inquiry to the Surrey welfare office, the administrator agreed to lend the family $20 in lieu of family allowance cheques which, because of the change of address, had yet to arrive.

Since coming to the Vancuouver area, the family has received about $1,650 plus assistance in paying for some of the drugs O'Toole requires.

That is broken down to a basic welfare payment for the last half of May of $156; a $500 special furniture grant; a basic welfare and rent grant for June of $426.50 and the same amount for July; a $50 food voucher in June and a $20 diet allowance in July.

The rent for the one-floor Surrey house they live in is $325 a month. They need the space and the wide doorways for the wheelchair to move around.

Mrs. O,Toole said she had just $137.50 at the beginning of June to buy food and pay the bills.

With the assistance of a $50 food voucher from the Grandview Woodland Resources Board office the family was able to get through June, said Mrs. O'Toole, by paying as few bills as possible.

She said the problems really began this month with their file was transferred to the Surrey welfare office where they were refused additional money after the $20 diet allowance was granted.

She said the Surrey office is not looking at the O'Tooles' case on compassionate grounds.

"This month my husband was really sick so he has to eat more . . . If he doesn't eat he is going to lose weight and get in a weakened state where the infection could kill him."

Because of O'Toole's special high-protein diet, Mrs. O'Toole said he needs 18 eggs and two quarts of mile a day, plus meat and vegetables.

With the government handicap assistance grant, the family's monthly income will be about $615 in August.

He Found A Home In China

Times Peking Bureau

PEKING — In the late 1940s a young man from Pennsylvania called James Veneris drifted from job to job and city to city. It wasn't much of a life.

Today, James Veneris says he is a happy man. He leads the simple structured life of an ordinary worker in a Chinese factory.

He loves Chairman Mao. Marx, Lenin and Mao have explained the world to him in basic terms. And as often as not these days, he says, he even thinks in Chinese.

What happened in between was that James Veneris joined the U.S. Army, got captured in the Korean War by Chinese Communist forces, and then later announced that he was turning his back on the United States and going to live in China.

He was 28 when he was captured and now, at 54, he is about to leave China for a long vacation in the United States where he will visit his 80-year-old mother, his three sisters and the seven nieces and nephews he has never met.

"I'm a man who has double happiness," Veneris said in on interview soon after receiving his passport from the U.S. liaison office.

"I'm happy to go back to the United States for a visit. I'll be happy to come back to China.

"I'm going to be in the States for five and a half months, I'm going to spend Christmas there and then I'll return to China and live the rest of my life here."

Veneris is the last of the 21 Americans to leave but he confirmed that one of the others, Howard Adams, has returned to live in Tsinan.

During the last three of four years, he says, the Chinese let him know that he was welcome to return to the United States for a visit. All 21 men were told when they first came to China that they could leave for good whenever they wanted to.

His announced intention of returning to China seems totally genuine as he talks about the satisfaction and security of his life as a laborer in a paper mill in Tsinan, an industrial city 250 miles south of Peking.

His job is in a workshop where the wornout hemp shoes of peasants are chopped into the raw material out of which paper is made. "I used to work on a lathe but I always had to stay fixed in one place. So I got transferred. Now I really like my job. I get to move around a lot."

Actually, in the last two years Veneris has not worked at all and he will not resume his job until he returns.

Two cataract operations on his eyes have kept him sidelined. But, he quickly points out, all his medical care has been free, he still gets his pay and he still lives in a simple dormitory apartment in the factory compound.

"They treat me like a baby," he says, and means it as a compliment.

Nevertheless, it appears that the last few years have taken their toll.

He bears little resemblance to the young, rather chunky-looking man with pitch-black hair in a photograph token in 1954. He is thin, his hair is grey and white, he looks closer to 64 than 54.

In 1966, after his first Chinese wife had died of tuberculosis, he married a Chinese widow with four children. They then had two children of their own and the eight of them share the apartment which consists of two small and two large rooms.

"That's another reason why you know I'm coming back. To marry a woman and have children and then just to leave her, that's a crime."

When he gets back to the Unitel States he wants to find out about "new inventions, electronics, Sputniks, things like that."

Now he wants to know how much it will cost to take a bus from Hawthorne, California, where his mother lives, to his hometown of Vandergrift, Pennsylvania, where he hopes to look up some old friends.

The Chinese Red Cross is paying for his return airfare and for having two Western-style suits made. "What are they wearing in the States these days?" he asks. "I hear you can almost wear anything."

Asked what he has missed during his life in China, he hesitates. Well, hamburgers for one thing. "Smothered with onions. With mustard and ketchup . . . and French toast. I loved French toast . . .with maple syrup all over it. And a big slab of butter on top."

Veneris doesn't talk much about the politics of his conversion to Chinese Communism.

He puts it in personal terms. When he refers to the "People's Volunteers," which was the name Peking gave to the Chinese Army fighting in Korea, he says, "I just loved those people . . . and I know that they really liked the American people That's why I love Chairman Mao. He loves all the peoples of the world."

Jaasma Gets 18 Months For Fraud and Thefts

EDMONTON (CP) — Albert Jaasma of Vancouver, former president of the now defunct Cosmopolitan Life Assurance Co., was sentenced Thursday in Alberta supreme court to 18 months in jail.

Jaasma, 56, a native of the Netherlands who came to Canada in 1955, had pleaded guilty June 9 to stealing $194,164 from Red Deer Motors Ltd. in 1970, $65,000 in cash or securities from Cosmopolitan Life in 1971 and $85,000 in property from Seaboard Life Insurance Co. Ltd. of Vancouver in the same year.

He had also pleaded guilty to defrauding Cosmopolitan of shares of Seaboard.

Mr. Justice Michael O'Byrne handed down 18-month terms on each of three charges. The charge involving the theft from Seaboard brought a sentence of one year.

All the sentences are to be served concurrently.

When Jaasma, who is hard of hearing, was told of the sentence, he exclaimed: "What!" before his lawyer led him from the courtroom.

Mr. Justice O'Byrne said that while there was no direct personal gain for Jaasma from the transactions, there was a potential for personal gain since he was a shareholder and a director of the companies involved.

The judge said there did not seem to be a long-term deliberate scheme to defraud yet the charges were serious, involving large sums of money and "no doubt many people were hurt."

Mr. Justice O'Byrne said he took into account the poor health of the accused and his good record prior to the charges.

Fringe Benefit

HOLLYWOOD — Elizabeth Ray, the secretary who has alleged that she was hired by Congressman Wayne Hays to be his mistress, said Thursday she will portray herself in a movie based on the book she has written about the Washington sex scandals.

Miss Ray said the movie, based on the book The Washington Fringe Benefit, will be released near the end of the year.

"I hope the public will see how the nation's capitol is run and how the people that they vote for control other people." she said.

Miss Ray added that the movie will be accurate, but that names will be changed.

Mortimer Wheeler Dies at Age of 85

LONDON — Sir Morfimer Wheeler, a Scotsman who pioneered modern scientific archeology and who once said "I want to live to 90 or die in the attempt," died Thursday at 85 at the home of a friend.

Wheeler was a hero in two world wars. He was twice television personality of the year in Britian, and some of his colleagues were so irked by his style and charisma that they called him Flash Harry.

Just about everyone in Britian knew him from his frequent television appearances.

He did much to popularize what became known as "the weekend dig" in which ordinary people volunteered to help in archeological excavation.

On television, he was a star of the Animal, Vegetable or Mineral program in which a group of experts had to identify objects presented to them.

He married three times but had lived apart from his third wife for years. He had one son by his first wife.

He was born in 1890, the son of a journalist.

He served with distinction in the British Army in the First and the Second World Wars, earning among other awards the Military Cross for leading his field artillery battery on a raid that captured two German machine-gun nests.

Although years over age, he fought in the Second World War as a brigadier in the 8th Army from El Alamein to Tunis and on to the Salerno landing.

He earned degrees of master of arts and doctor of literature at London University in his 20s.

The turning point came for him when at 23 he was awarded a new archeological studentship which led him to research on Romano-Rhenish pottery.

Zero Mostel Shrugs, Snorts . . . And Erupts . . . Through Success

By KENNETH TURAN
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Zero Mostel is a Silly Putty bomb with a very short fuse. He laughs, he shrugs, he snorts, he wails, but mostly he simply erupts.

There is no quiet person inside of him trying to get out, he says, only a louder one. "You know the trouble with you, Zero," a friend once said. "You have no unexpressed thoughts."

Arriving in his hotel lobby, he hops on o luggage cart, walks into a door and heads for lunch. "What's he eating?" he demands to know. "Give me a stick and I'll kill it."

He is a verbal holocaust, fueled by unequal parts of Yiddish and profanity, a ferocious talker who is delighted to agree that he simply "consumes" the opposition.

"If you write that," he roars out of nowhere, "your beard will be found strand by strand from here to North Passaic." He is the all-too-human-Rhinoceros, the mournful Estragon of "Waiting for Godot," the dyseptic Max Bialystock — "the King of Broadway forced to wear a cardboard belt" — of Mel Brooks' "The Producers," the slave Pseudolus of "A Funny Thing Happened On The Way To The Forum." Looking quizzically at a bottle of wine and asking, "Was it a good year?"

He is all his roles at once and then some, a walking compendium of the human condition. No wonder it is difficult for him to sit still for questions. "The idea of an interview," he announces, "is to lie. You extract the truth somehow."

In 1964, Mostel created the role he is now reprising at the Kennedy Centre here, the much-put-upon Tevye of "Fiddler on the Roof."

He won his third consecutive Tony for that, Newsweek put him on its cover, he was called Broadway's newest divinity with no rivals in sight.

Instead, Mostel himself almost dropped from sight. "I suffered from a series of successes," he says, laughing as always. "I was depressed by my successes."

For Zero Mostel is hardly a celebrity who does the expected. "Now, do I look like a star image?" he asks, rumpled and relaxed.

"I hate that image crap and the behavior of some of them and the demands they make. I never liked coteries or public relations men. Even the money is illusory. Now when I get a lot of money, it goes to an accountant. I'll show you my balance," triumphantly pulling out his checkbook. "$1,044 minus $25."

So Mostel has disregarded all considerations except doing what he wants to do. He starred in "Ulysses in Nighttown," a version of the Joyce novel. He did a Paddy Chayefsky play, "The Latent Heterosexual," in Dallas.

Last year he even did an opera, Puccini's "Gianni Schicchi." He has resisted doing Shakespeare, because "I don't want to get trapped with a company that wants to do it 'their way.' Who knows how they did it in Shakespeare's day? They even spelled wrong." In this consistent pursuit of himself, Mostel has turned down some enticing roles. He was sought for the peddler in "Oklahoma" and says Oscar Hammerstein even told him he could add his own songs. He almost turned down "A Funny Thing" and claims he only occepted because his wife, Kathryn, a former Rockette, threatened to stab him if he didn't.

He even almost refused "Fiddler," saying, "When I first read it I thought, 'This is the worst crock I've ever seen in my life'," but some instinct told him it would shape up and be a success.

As for the film version made without him, he says scornfully, "The "The place looked like a resort. 'Let's stay for the summer; why should we ever leave?" The barn could have belonged to the Rockefellers.

"I don't have good luck in films" he adds of his Hollywood career in general. "God forbid you should act in films,

PRAIRIE PRIVY PLAN PROTESTED

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some U.S. farmers are outraged at a privy-on-the-prairie proposal that would require them to provide toilets, washing facilities and drinking water within a five-minute walk of all field workers.

Since the proposal was made last April, the Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) has received about 1,000 letters, mostly from farmers who cite cost, impracticality and difficulty of enforcement as potential problems. Few are from farm workers.

One irate Florida farmer says his workers must control their bowel movements when they are working so as not to reduce productivity.

Faced with this outhouse impasse, OSHA officials concede changes in the standard will be made. 'I think it will have to be modified,'' said W. M. Glasier, an OSHA agricultural safety specialist.

He said, however, that some regulation is necessary because not everyone takes care of workers. Glasier cited a letter from a farmer in Coconut Grove, Fla., who wrote:

''These proposed standards only give a worker another excuse to be goofing off while on the job and will not provide any real benefit to the worker.

KOALAS FLY ROYALLY

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Preparations resembling a mini astronaut training program have been completed in Australia to prepare six koalas for a flight to San Francisco. Each will have his or her own reserved seat aboard the plane.

The Koalas are a bicentennial gift from Australia and will wind up in the San Diego Zoo.

Since there has been a total ban on the export of koalas for 20 years, Quantas admits it has no precedent to follow concerning how to ship the teddy bear-like marsupials.

Several months ago, nine koalas were selected to begin tests to determine which six would go to the United States. They underwent lengthy physical examinations and also were watched to see which responded best to human contact and handling. They were driven long distances to check their reaction to travel, noise and motion.

The koalas will sit in the cabin so that handlers can keep an eye on them.

Lawyers Study Court Delays

A committee has been formed by the Victoria Bar Association to seek solutions to the growing problem of an ever-widening gap between dates of charge and trial in provincial court.

One meeting was held this week and several more are expected before recommendations are submitted to the judges.

Meanwhile, Judge F. S. Green, who is presiding this month in the main call-list section of provincial court, has instituted a couple of actions on his own, apparently with the same goal in mind.

Green this week stood three cases to the bottom of the list when the accused person and his lawyer didn't respond when the cases were called shortly after the 9:30 a.m. start. They weren't called again until about 11:30. In another instance an arrest warrant was approved for an undefended man who failed to answer the 9:45 a.m. call. There was no second call.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

"I do not like sentencing young people to incarceration . . . I have very grave doubts that incarceration helps in their rehabilitation," Judge F. S. Green said Thursday in Victoria provincial court.

But, he added, jail sometimes is needed for the accused person and the public protection — and that was why Rodney Thomas McQuarrie, 18, of 1225 Rudlin, was sentenced to an 80-day jail term.

McQuarrie pleaded guilty July 9 to a Saanich charge of taking a friend's car without the owner's consent March 27. He had an accident, left the car and walked back to the friend's home.

Green said a pre-sentence report showed McQuarrie was either "skilled in the art of manipulating others . . . (or) an honest, happy go lucky man who is immature." It also showed McQuarrie was on two terms of probation at the time of the offence.

The judge said he would have made the jail term longer but for the fact he wanted McQuarrie to repay ICBC $821 for the damage to the car. He put McQuarrie on 18 months' probation to start when he leaves jail and said the money must be paid by Nov. 1, 1977.

"Mr. McQuarrie, you're a good looking, intelligent, engaging young man," said Green. "It's time you smartened up."

* * *

Bail was refused by Green for Patrick Joseph McLoughlin, 28, of 1083 Redfern, and set at $1,200 surety for Joanne Gareau, 19, of the same address, on a joint charge of possession of hashish Wednesday in Victoria for the purpose of trafficking. Both were remanded to next week for further hearing.

In other major narcotics cases, Harold Arthur Reid, 26, of 717 Belton, was charged with trafficking in marijuana Wednesday in Victoria and possession of marijuana at the same time for the purpose of trafficking. He was released on his own recognizance in the sum of $1,000 and also remanded to next week.

Dec. 6 was set by Green as the date for preliminary hearing of a charge against Richard Thomas Atwood, 23, of 854 Seymour, and David William Dunstan, 22, of 1225 Dominion, of possession of marijuana July 13 in Saanich for the purpose of trafficking. Both have chosen trial by judge and jury and are free on bail pending the hearing.

* * *

Conditional discharges are rare enough in court but it is much rarer that they are recommended by a prosecutor.

Brian Peter Scotney, 17, of 5347 Alderley, pleaded guilty to a Saanich charge of theft of two tires and rims May 31 from a parked car. It was his first offence and he told Green a complicated but sincere story of a debt, adding, "I guess I figured it (theft) was better than to owe the guy money."

Prosecutor Nicholas Lang suggested a discharge because Scotney had returned the tires and "probably has learned his lesson." Green agreed, setting discharge conditions of six months' probation and 50 hours of community work.

* * *

A discharge with a four-month probationary term as the only major condition was allowed by Green for Valentin Ivancic, 29, of 642 Admirals, who pleaded guilty to a Victoria charge of common assault.

Court was told Ivancic had been drinking before wandering into Victoria General Hospital early May 23 in search of a friend. When he realized he was in the wrong place, he hid in a closet. A commissionaire opened the door and Ivancic, trying to knock away a flashlight aimed at his eyes, hit the commissionaire in the face instead.

The discharge was approved because Ivancic is a career serviceman and a conviction would be noted on his conduct sheet and could harm a forthcoming chance at promotion.

* * *

A higher-court trial was ordered by Green for Robert Ernest Landry, 29, address not known, after a preliminary hearing of a charge of trafficking in heroin in Victoria Jan. 21. A "no publication" order was issued at the request of defence lawyer Bruce McConnan.

* * *

Own-recognizance bail of $500 was chosen by Green for John Petrashuik, 22, address not known, who was remanded one week on three Victoria charges. One charged a July 15 break-in at Brooklands Motorcycle Sales and Service, 927 Fort, and theft of a motorcycle, while the others contained a total of six counts of false pretences.

* * *

"There's just too much of this . . . bravado," Green said in fining Terry Alvin Kirby, 21, of 1298 Highrock, $200 following a plea of guilty to a Saanich charge of obstructing a peace officer. Lang said police were arresting a friend of Kirby's late July 14 outside a beer parlor and Kirby twice tried to prevent it, bumping one officer once.

* * *

Only major drink-drive fine in traffic court was a $500 penalty for Russell Gregory Turner, 20, of 1164 Palmer, who pleaded guilty to a Saanich charge of driving July 17 with a blood-alcohol reading above .08 per cent.

Hot Off The Press!

CALGARY (CP) — An employee was injured and the Calgary Herald's early edition was delayed Monday because of a fire in the Herald circulation department, Edgar Middleton, the newspaper's circulation manager, said.

Lynn Dingle, 18, was treated for injuries after a lighting fixture fell on her head when the fire started in the second-floor circulation department ceiling, Middleton said.

Damage has been estimated at $50,000.

HOSTAGE DRAMA PAIR CLEARED

Two Wilkinson Road jail inmates were cleared Thursday in Victoria provincial court of one of the four counts in a joint charge laid against them after the Feb. 19 hostage incident.

But hte two men, Paul Joseph Desjarlais, 30, and Dennis Matthew Wilson, 23, face trial in a higher court on the other three counts after an all-day preliminary hearing of the charge before Judge William Ostler.

The judge discharged Desjarais and Wilson on one count of trying to break out of the prison gym in the all-night affair. But he committed both to a higher court for trial on two counts of unlawful confinement of jail guards and a third of trying to break out of the jail itself.

No one was injured in the incident, which lasted from about 8 p.m. Feb. 19 until 5 a.m. the next day and was mediated by Victoria lawyer Douglas Christie.

At the request of the defence, Ostler isued an order prohibiting publication or broadcast of evidence given during the hearing. David Lisson represented Desjarlais while Michael Hutchison appeared for Wilson.

Desjarlais returns to the same court section today for a preliminary hearing of charges resulting from a December incident in which a William Head inmate escaped and stayed for several hours in the home of a Metchosin couple.

TOWN TALK

After two centuries Hawaiians have made amends for the barbarous ways of their Sandwich Island ancestors — with five cases of juicy fresh pineapples despatched air-freight to Victoria.

The penalty was first discussed during a recent brief visit to Hawaii by Mayor Mike Young. At a reception Young fell in conversation with the chairman of the state's agriculture department, John Sarias, and learned that his host was heavily involved in planning bicentennial festivities to mark the islands' discovery by Captain James Cook in 1778.

Young mentioned that Victoria was having its own event, a Cook memorial unveiling, and invited Sarias to attend. After all, he said, it was the least he could do considering his forbears had bumped off the famous explorer.

Sarias initially accepted but telephoned Young about four days before the July 12 ceremony to say he couldn't come.

But "in atonement" for past sins, he added, he was sending over some pineapples.

At almost the exact moment Fraser was making his announcemnt, a public works crew set to work repainting the faded parking space lines on — you guessed it—the front driveway of the buildings.

There is no official explanation of the overlap. All queries bring only red-faces.

MRS. BRUNNING
. . . happy 101-year-old

Mrs. Ellen Brunning shunned cigarettes and beer all her life and that's why she's still around to talk about it . . . 101 years later,

Now in Homewood Rest Home, 3907 Blenkinsop, Mrs. Brunning also attributes her longevity to an ability to keep happy at everything she did — including work.

"And she still is an extremely happy person," says Mrs. Elsie Herbert, nurse and proprietor of the home.

Red Deer is a Central Alberta city of about 32,000. It would be a lot bigger except everyone keeps moving to Victoria.

More than 200 Red Deer expatriates recently gathered in Beacon Hill Park to relive the pleasures of the Prairie summers and the exhilaration of its winters.

The consensus was that Red Deer is still a great place to visit, preferably in the summer.

Picnic organizer George Horn reported the flow of Red Deerites to Victoria increases each year and they seem to be coming at a young age. In all there are 180 known families consisting of some 500 people from Red Deer in this area.

A mention of the weekly paper in a Max Low story last week brought our feature writer a gift of a potted plant along with this note:

It's a fair drive from Victoria's Sportsman Motor Inn to Parksville's Park Sands resort but Neil de Macedo expects to be making the drive quite often now that his company, Demco Management, has purchased the up-Island property.

Park Sands, popular with Victorians, has been in operation since 1909 and consists of cottages, tenting grounds and trailer park. Gordon and Edith Bannerman have owned it for the past five years and they will continue as managers until a new administrator is appointed by Demco on Jan. 1.

"We have no specific plans for Park Sands, we just thought it looked interesting so we purchased it," de Macedo says.

That grey monolith of concrete rising from the steps of the spacious, glass-fronted main entrance to the Law Courts on Burdett Avenue is a new stair well. So what was wrong with the old stairs, apart from the fact people could hardly find them?

Not a thing. But since the original structure went up more than a decade ago the building safety code has tightened up. Since two additional storeys were being added it was thought appropriate and timely to raise the standard of access by means of the new concrete column attached to the exterior.

The new court support facilities were to have been ready for occupancy in October—until the construction shutdown came along. Now nobody's guessing how much longer the higher courts will be stuck in rickety old St. Ann's.

Jim, who had been piqued about the peak, got word this week from federal Energy and Resources Minister Alastair Gillespie that there's no way the mountain's name will be changed back to its original Castle Mountain.

Nesbitt led the battle against a group of Albertans who had been pressuring for the name change.

The very idea, huffed Jim, was "rude, ungrateful, childish, boorish, insulting, spiteful, petty, despicable, ungracious and undignified".

Fares: Once More with Feeling

The Association of Vancouver Island Municipalities — angered and frustrated by government indifference to its demand for a conference on ferry rates — will try again to make its case for a reduction in fares.

AVIM members met for 90 minutes in Saanich Thursday and announced they will once more seek a meeting with cabinet ministers.

Port Alberni Ald. George McKnight, president of AVIM, said the group asked Transport Minister Jack Davis May 17 for a ferry fares conference and made the same request July 9 to Premier Bill Bennett.

He said the association hasn't received a reply from either Davis or the premier.

'To ignore the request of an association which represents virtually everyone living on the Island is inexcusable, unforgiveable," McKnight said.

Duncan Mayor Ken Paskin, vice-president of AVIM, added: "It is sad we have to go to this point and take this kind of action . . . it comes out of frustration."

Twenty-two representatives from councils and seven regional boards on the Island attended the meeting. Invitations had been extended to Davis and the nine Vancouver Island MLAs including Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis.

But only four of the MLAs —Scott Wallace (PC - Oak Bay), Charles Barber (NDP-Victoria), Sam Bawlf (SC-Victoria) and Barbara Wallace (Cowichan-Malahat) — turned up.

McKnight said Davis told the association he would be in Ottawa while Curtis replied he couldn't attend without stating any reason.

The association unanimously endorsed a six-point statement which calls for a rollback in freight rates and the setting of preferential rates for Island residents, and urges the government to pursue federal subsidies on the grounds the ferries form a part of the Trans-Canada Highway system.

It notes some increase in ferry rates was warranted — McKnight suggested 20 per cent — "but not the exorbitant rates presently in effect" — and implores the government to recognize the negative effect the new rate structure has had on the tourist industry.

Tory leader Scott Wallace said the association is "whistling in the dark" if it hopes the provincial government would be able to get federal subsidies. He castigated Saanich Mayor Ed Lum for suggesting the high cost of food and lodging on the Island was responsible in part for the decline in number of tourists this year.

"It's too simplistic to point a finger at the industry," Wallace said. "The answer lies not in blanket condemnations but in on-going dialogue between government and residents."

He said the fact no representative of cabinet was at the meeting leaves him with the impression the decision on ferry fares is inflexible and unbinding.

Bawlf said he came to listen and not to speak. He pointed out, however, there had been an increase in passenger traffic on the Swartz Bay-Tsawwassen run although added it was still down 2 per cent from last year.

Bawlf chided the association members for "making a noise" about the plight of the tourist industry on the Island. He said such talk would be "more destructive than anything because the word gets around Vancouver Island is not a good place to visit."

That raised the ire of association members, one of whom said that when the Socreds campaigned last fall they promised if elected they would be available to discuss problems.

'But," he said, "it's almost impossible to get to see or talk to anyone in the party.

"Get back to the party and tell them we want to be listened to. Get back to the party . . .which I belong to."

Parity Awarded Firemen

By KIT COLLINS
Times Staff

Victoria firefighters today won wage parity with their counterparts in Vancouver.

Arbitrator John Davie said his decision was made because of the trend towards parity by firefighters the province over.

The contract is retroactive to Jan. 1, 1976.

The ups and down of the Vancouver-Victoria wage rates were included in evidence in the hearing, Davie said. In 1964 Victoria was the highest paid department in B.C., but thereafter it slipped back.

The Duncan lawyer said in 1975 Victoria firefighters placed about 20th out of 35 departments.

Because of evidence showing the dependence of the greater part of B.C. to set their rates by the Vancouver rate, "I am satisfied there will be no wrong done if I do the same thing."

The city's view that because of the excellent benefit plan of Victoria firefighters wages should be less than Vancouver was unfounded, Davie said.

He said firefighters should not be penalized because of the benefit plan because "it would amount to giving with one hand and taking back with the other."

Vancouver firefighters are bargaining for a new contract which is expected to widen the 2.6 per cent disparity with Victoria's force to almost 18 per cent.

Firefighters here have asked for parity or an increase of 17.6 per cent and the city proposed an increase of 7.3 per cent, plus .7 per cent for fringe benefits.

Davie noted that he was only required to set down the terms of the contract and said he believed he had accomplished the job by hooking it to the outcome of Vancouver negotiations for this year.

The Anti-Inflation Board guidelines will have to be followed in the Vancouver negotiations, and because of the disparity with Victoria it may mean Victoria's actual wage increase will exceed the guidelines.

But the decision will rest with the AIB, Davie said.

The Vancouver contract will apply to the Victoria firefighters in all areas except for payments to first aid attendants.

Top Convention Post Given McCarthy's Former Manager

By LIZ HUGHES
Times Staff

Travel Industry Minister Grace McCarthy has appointed the man who ran her campaign in the December provincial election to a $25,000 job as B.C.'s convention co-ordinator.

The minister announced the appointment of promotion specialist John Plul today.

Mrs. McCarthy said Plul will work out of Vancouver and will attempt to convince convention groups to bring their business to Vancouver and Victoria.

Plul will also encourage groups which come to B.C. for conventions to see more of B.C. "through the aggressive promotion of trips before and after the convention itself." McCarthy said.

Plul, 36, has been administrator of the radio station CKNW's Orphans' Fund for the past 10 years and has also acted as the station's promotion manager for the past six years.

He has worked for five years with the promotion and convention committee of the Greater Vancouver Convention and Visitor's Bureau.

Plul was hired to try to boost B.C.'s $45 million annual earnings from conventions.

McCarthy said Plul and other staff members of the travel industry department will also be looking at opportunities to encourage B.C. firms and associations to hold their provincial and regional meetings at locations outside of Vancouver and Victoria.

McCarthy said priority is being given to promoting convention business because it is a year-round industry and because convention delegates spend far more money than individuals or groups travelling independently.

Meanwhile, just over $11,000 has been pledged by businesses up to this morning in the campaign to encourage more visitors to Victoria.

$35,000 To Fight Erosion

The provincial cabinet has authorized the spending of $35,000 to help fight the shoreline erosion at Mount Douglas Park.

Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis said today the money will come from funds allocated by the Capital Improvement District Commission for shoreline erosion control and beautification programs in the Victoria area.

Curtis said he began his quest for government assistance while he was on Saanich council in 1973.

Crash Cuts Power

A 34-year-old man was taken to Victoria General Hospital after the car he was driving sliced into a power pole at Metchosin Road and Laren early this morning.

Dennis Burzuk of 432 Suemar Place was reported in fair condition with a fractured leg.

The accident occurred at 2:42 a.m. and the resulting power failure which lasted two hours and 15 minutes was largely unnoticed by the residents in the area.

One exception, however, was Vic and Virginia Foster of 3963 Metchosin Road.

Mrs. Foster, a clerk at the Colwood RCMP office, said her husband was connected to a kidney machine having his blood dialysed when the lights went out.

Mrs. Foster said she had to find candles to get enough light so that she and her husband could see the machine and drain the blood off.

Car Rentals at Ferries

The B.C. Ferries terminal at Swartz Bay and Tsawwassen will soon have rent-a-car stands, assistant ferry traffic manager Bill Bouchard said today.

Tenders on the franchise were let several months ago and the successful bidder will be picked within a month.

Bouchard said a similar system was tried on a trial basis a few years ago, but it didn't work.

"It just didn't pan out then," Bouchard said. "People thought nothing about paying $5 to take their car across."

Bouchard said a rent-a-car system would be practical for a businessman who would be able to walk on the ferry as a foot-passenger on one side, assured of getting the ferry he wants, and pick up a car on the other side. The franchise will be given to the same company for both terminals.

Why Should Rec Facilities Have to Pay Their Way?

Operating civic recreational facilities should be regarded as a service to Victoria residents and not as an assortment, of "frill" activities to be financed by user groups and individuals.

In endorsing that philosophy on Thursday, members of the city parks and recreation committee appeared to be presenting a united front of opposition to the arguments advanced by committee chairman Ald. Ron McKenzie.

On several occasions during protracted budget discussions earlier this year, McKenzie urged council to review its whole policy on sports and recreation, particularly with a view to standardizing subsidies and bringing rates charged more in line with actual costs.

Used as the basis for Thursday's deliberations was a mass of data from recreation manager Jack Morgan, including the costs of operating the city's four main facilities (Memorial Arena, Crystal Pool, McPherson Playhouse and Royal Athletic Park), a breakdown of attendance, fees charged and city subsidy for each user group, and financial comparisons with 10 other B.C. municipalities.

But before any of the details could be discussed Ald. Bill Tindall challenged the rationale of revising rates.

He said there are already clear signs that some of the city's facilities are becoming deserted mausoleums — programs and rates at the Crystal Pool, for example, are not attractive enough in relation to the new Oak Bay Recreation Centre — and rather than raising admission rates council should consider reducing them.

The costs of running the pool are unchanged whether it's occupied at the time by 20 or 200 youngsters, he noted.

Tindall said operating costs must always be borne in mind but they must also be related to the use in question. The self-supporting school of thought could be extended to ridiculous limits, including installation of meters on tennis courts and fencing off Beacon Hill Park for paid admission only.

"I am under the impression we are driving minor sports out of the city" to neighboring municipalities where they receive better financial treatment, he added.

But Mayor Mike Young retorted that he doesn't want to get involved in a "price war" with Oak Bay or anyone else. "That would be nonsense. We are not trying to compete in this but supply a service."

Said Ald. Bob Ellis: "I think we have to realize that we are running a city and not a shop. It mystifies me why we always have to try to justify our expenditures on everything — arguing about who gets what in the way of subsidies."

To prepare charts showing that a minor hockey player receives a $2 subsidy from the city while a participant in some other sport receives only $1.75 is absurd, Ellis claimed.

Young told aldermen he would not be prepared to consider reducing charges for any civic facilities unless and until there is solid proof available that patronage has suffered because present rates are too high.

Although McKenzie pointed out there was "considerable pressure" from the public for reductions, the mayor said the only undertaking he would give was that rates for amateur bodies would be maintained at their current levels.

Meanwhile, however, the committee recommended a series of increases in rentals charged to professional users.

A Silver Hand Up

Canada Wins a Silver As Five Records Fall

MONTREAL (CP) — Five more world records in swimming, the first Canalian silver medal and a triumph by the Britsh team in the gruelling modern pentathlon marked the fifth day of competition in the 21st Olympic Games.

The Soviet team, somewhat upstaged to date by the East German and American record smashers, harvested three gold medals and a burgeoning crop of rhubarb.

Already hurt by the disqualification of pentathlete Boris Onischenko for doctoring his epee with an electronic device that registered non-existent hits, the Russians were embroiled with Olympic officials in two further incidents.

Poul Hauch of London, Ont., secretary of the International Swimming Federation (FINA) said the federation would discuss allegations that the Russians had sought to make deals with judges from other countries to ensure higher marks for Soviet divers.

There was better news for the Russians on the gymnastics floor, where tiny Nelli Kim split the honors with Romania's Nadia Comaneci in the four apparatus finals, each claiming two championships.

And Russia enjoyed its second sweep in two days as Viktor Krovopousko led two other Soviet fencers to medals in individual saber.

Meanwhile the Olympic pool, scene of the first Russian sweep in the women's 200-metre breaststroke, returned to normal as five world records fell and the golds were shared by East German girls and American men.

A U.S. foursome that was not considered good enough to swim in the final owned the world mark in the 4x100-metre medley relay for a few hours after the morning heats until the firststringers took over and smashed it again in the evening.

Their credentials were flawless. Backstroker John Naber, breaststroker John Hencken, butterfly specialist Matt Vogel and freestyler Jim Montgomery had already earned at least one gold medal apiece and all but Vogel had broken world records in their events.

The winning time of three minutes 42.2 seconds and the Canadian clocking of 3:45.94 were both under the 3:47.28 performance of the American heatwinners.

In the women's events, the evening belonged to Kornelia Ender, who ran her gold-medal total to four with victories in the 100-metre butterfly and 200 freestyle, equalling a world record in the former and breaking one in the latter, all in less than half an hour.

In the men's 400 freestyle, Brian Goodell of the U.S. made it two in a row with a world record clocking of 3:51.93 to go with the world mark he set in the 1,500 freestyle earlier in the week.

Phil Boggs won another U.S. gold medal in men's springboard diving by a comfortable margin over Franco Cagnotto of Italy, who also won the silver medal at the 1972 Games. Klaus DiBiasi, the Italian who won the gold at the last two Olympics, had to settle for eighth place this time.

Chris Clarke of Halifax became the fourth Canadian boxer to reach the second round, outpointing Lasse Friman of Finland in the light welterweight division. He was the first who had to work for his victory, the first three advancing on walkovers.

Volleyball Showdown

Japan's 15-13, 15-8, 15-9 conquest of Brazil gave the 1972 gold medallists a 2-0 record, tied with the Soviets in Group B of the nine-team competition. Japan and the Soviets meet in their final opening-round match Sunday.

The winner will get a semi-final berth against the second-place team in Group A, while the loser will have to face Group A leader Poland, the defending world champions.

Brazil, the South America zone winners, proved no match for Japan, which has won a medal every year since volleyball was added to the Olympic program at the Tokyo games in 1964.

In women's play, South Korea stormed back to take a 5-15, 11-15, 16-14, 15-2, 15-13 victory over East Germany and put themselves in position for a semi-final apearance if they can get past surprising Cuba on Saturday.

The Soviet Union beat Cuba 15-9, 13-15, 15-11, 15-10 in the only other game on the shortened schedule.

It was the quick Korean women, however, who gave more than 4,500 fans a thrilling finale to the night's play when they overpowered East Germany in the fourth set to require a decisive fifth.

The European team led 12-7 before Korea battled back to tie at 13-13.

Then, after two service exchanges, Soonok Jung drove a spike cross-court at East German forward Ingrid Mierzwiak. She managed to dig it up, but returned it wide down the side.

Some of the East Germans, who finished fourth behind Korea at the 1974 world championships, wept as a pro-Korean crowd awarded the teams a standing ovation and Korean fans burst into song, waving flags wildly.

Pentathlon Gold to U.K.

MONTREAL (AP) — Britian won the Olympic gold medal in the modern pentathlon Thursday when Adrian Parker outdistanced 46 other runners in the 4,000-metre race.

The British team picked up 15,559 points. Czechoslovakia finished second with 15,451 and Hungary third with 15,395.

Canada's team of Jack Alexander of Sarnia, Ont., John Hawes of Dorval, Que., and George Skene of Calgary was 13th and last.

The British were in fifth place over-all at the start of the race. Parker covered the distance in 12:09, which was 17 seconds faster than second-place finisher Michael Burley of the United States.

The individual gold went to Poland's Janucz Pyciak-Peciak, who also came from fifth place to grab the title. He had 5,520 points. Pvael Lednev of Russia was runner-up with 5,485, and Jan Bartu of Czechosolvakia third with 5,466.

Alexander was 14th in the cross-country race in which Hawes finished 37th and Skene 38th.

In the individual over-all standings for the five events — shooting, fencing, riding, swimming and running — Hawes was 43rd, Skene 45th and Alexander 46th among the 46 competitors.

Nadia and Nelli Decked with Gold

MONTREAL (AP) — Nadia Comaneci and Nelli Kim reaped all of the Olympic gold in women's gymnastics Thursday night—Comaneci with two perfect 10-point performances and Kim with one.

Miss Comaneci, Romania's 14-year-old queen of world gymnastics, hit her sixth and seventh perfect performances of the week for gold medals on the uneven bars and balance beam and added a bronze in the floor exercise.

Miss Kim, the 19-year-old Soviet star, won the floor exercise with a perfect 10 and took the vault, her specialty, with a 9.95.

Olga Korbut, the darling of the 1972 Munich games, won only one individual medal—a silver in the balance beam.

But she got the warmest ovation of the night from the overflow crowd of more than 16,000 at The Forum.

Miss Comaneci's performance capped a week in which she emerged as an athletic and media superstar. She won a total of three gold medals, took a silver medal in the team event and a bronze. She also won the attention and admiration of the world as Olga had done before.

Nadia's routine on the uneven parallel bars, which was worth her fourth perfect mark, was the highlight of the evening. As she whipped her slim body from one wooden bar to the next like a rubber band, anticipation of the crowd grew as she moved toward her dramatic back somersault dismount known as the "Salto Comaneci."

When she soared backward off the high bar into the dismount, flashbulbs popped like firecrackers from the stands of the arena. The landing was flawless and Miss Comaneci had her gold with a 20.0 total score.

The final result for individual events was arrived at by averaging her score in the event in the compulsory and the optional and adding Thursday's total.

Theodora Ungureanu, Nadia's 15-year-old teammate, took the silver with a 9.9 routine and a 19.80 total. Marta Egervari of Hungary was third with 19.775.

Withdraws From Shot Putt

MONTREAL (CP) — Bishop Dolegiewicz of Montreal, Canada's top shot putter in Olympic trials, withdrew from the event Thursday because of a nagging injury to his throwing hand.

Team-mate Bruce Pirnie said Dolegiewicz, however, would compete in the discus event because there is no strain on the wrist in that event.

Sport, Not Politics

DAKAR (Reuter) — President Leopold Senghor of Senegal defended Thursday his country's decision not to join the African boycott of the Olymics Games and vowed that Senegal would compete even if all other African countries pulled out.

"We think politics should be talked about in the United Nations. At the Olympic Games, one shouuld talk sport."

Women Wilt

MONTREAL (CP) — Canada's women's basketball team, led by a 24-point performance by Carol Turney of Chilliwack, put up a real battle before bowing 89-75 to the United States in Olympic competition Thursday night.

The victory gave the Americans a 2-1 record while Canada is winless in three games in the six-team round-robin.

The Canadians took the lead mid-way through the opening half and held the edge until early in the second half when the lead see-sawed for several minutes as both teams put on an exceptional display of shooting.

With 13 minutes to go Sue Rojcewicz scored a field goal that ignited a 14-point U.S. outburst. The U.S. went ahead to stay with 12 minutes.

Bev Bland of Richmond and Sheila Strike of West Vancouver scored 14 points apiece while Sylvia Sweeney of Beaconsfield, Que., and Angie Johnson of Winnipeg scored six each.

SHOOTER SHARES HIS ROSTRUM

MONTREAL (CP) — Lanny Bassham of the United States, who won a shooting gold medal on a technicality, protested tie-breaking methods Thursday by sharing the winner's rostrum with silver-medalist Margaret Murdock, also of the U.S.

As the national flags were being raised at the awards ceremony, Bassham reached down and helped Murdock to the winner's rostrum and held her tightly until the American national anthem finished playing.

Bassham won the three-position rifle event Wednesday after he and Murdock finished with identical total scores. The judges declared him the winner because he had shot a better final round.

Murdock was leading the match, but the tie resulted when a routine review of targets gave Bassham an additional point.

"We both scored the same and we think that there should be two golds as in some other sports, or some way to decide it by skill," said Murdock, 33.

WORLD MEET IN GERMANY

MONTREAL (CP) — The first world track and field championship will take place in Dusseldorf, West Germany, Sept. 2 to 4, 1977, it was announced Thursday.

The congress of the International Amateur Athletic Federation voted to approve the proposal for the international competition.

It will include eight teams, including some national teams and combined teams of the best athletes in Africa, Asia, Oceania, Europe and the Americas.

Touts Hike Pressure

MONTREAL (CP) — Diane Jones, the pentathlon star from Saskatoon, would feel better if the Canadian public and reporters would stop touting her as one of Canada's top hopes for an Olympic medal.

"There's pressure enough just being a Canadian in the Olympic Games on Canadian soil," the five-foot-10 blonde said in an interview.

"I don't want to feel that I've failed my country if I come fourth. I've got to be happy with that, assuming I do my best. All these years of training really come down to two days now."

The pentathlon begins Sunday and ends Monday. Jones won the pentathlon gold medal at the Pan-American Games in Mexico last year and established her best personal mark of 4,673 points. She is ranked in the top five in the world.

The pentathlon consists of five events, the high jump, shot put, long jump, the 100-metre hurdles and the 200-metre sprint.

Jones's strong points are the field events and she admits she has difficulty with the two track disciplines. She also is entered in the regular long jump Friday.

Jones, 25, said she can relax physically, but "my mind is always going."

She said she had experimented with transcendental meditation, hypnosis and yoga with a doctor in Saskatoon in May "to increase my concentration and discipline my mind."

Jones said her boy-friend, wide receiver John Konihowski of the Canadian Football League Edmonton Eskimos, has been offering encouragement by telephone since she arrived.

Asked if the telephone conversations were on a daily basis, Jones said it was "probably more like every other day because his contract's not that good—he's a Canadian."

NOTES FROM THE OLYMPICS

Glasses and Gum Excess Baggage

An indicator light flashed on, indicating the 18-year-old schoolboy was too heavy for his 105.6-pound class in Greco-Roman wrestling.

"The first thing he did was take off his glasses," said U.S. manager Jim Peckham.

"Then he spit out his chewing gum."

That did work. The light went off.

Later in the day, Russian veteran Alexey Shumakov snuffed out the last light of Farina's Olympic hopes when he handed him his second defeat.

BROMONT, Que. (CP) — Are dressage judges overwhelmed by royalty?

The question arose following Princess Anne's ride in the dressage phase of the Olympic combined event Thursday. With the Queen and Prince Philip sitting in the stands, Anne got surprisingly good marks from the judges despite three serious incidents that marred an otherwise good ride.

The spirited mount, Goodwill, twice broke into a canter from the extended trot on the diagonal across the arena and once reacted strongly to a canter departure demand on a small circle. Goodwill also blew up on a trot down the centre line prior to the final salute.

Despite this, Princess Anne received an average score of 71 from the three judges, putting her in seventh place midway through the first round of the dressage.

Some ringside observers thought any other rider would have received a lower mark with a ride of similar quality.

MONTREAL (CP) — Carlos Nuzman, president of the Brazilian volleyball federation, charged Thursday that a trainer with the South Korean women's team offered $1,000 to Brazilian referee Antonio Pedro Costa to influence his decisions in a game with East Germany.

Nuzman, speaking to a group of journalists, also accused a Mexican referee of having acted as an intermediary in the attempt.

The Mexican is alleged to have met with a South Korean official and Costa at a dinner Wednesday. The official is said to have gone to the hotel where Costa is staying and given his wife an envelope containing a gift of $1,000.

Nuzman has reported his allegations to the referee's commission and the Games's organizing committee (COJO).

The Brazilian referee was relieved of his duties for the match.

MONTREAL (CP) — The Canadian Amateur Boxing Association failed to get Canadian fighters properly prepared for the Olympics, team coach Mike Nolan of Montreal said Thursday.

Nolan told a news conference that the Canadians should have started training for the Olympics three months ago, and "every time we ask for more money, we're told there isn't any," said Nolan. "Canadian fighters need international fights and didn't get them.

Nolan said more international matches were necessary if Canada was to be successful in boxing at the Olympics.

Coaches Blast Hoop Officials

MONTREAL (AP) — A simmering dissatisfaction with officiating in the Olympic men's basketball tournament boiled into public view Thursday, when Tom Nissalke, coach of the Puerto Rican team, angrily denounced the referees.

"They are inept," charged Nissalke after Puerto Rico had bowed to Czechoslovakia, 89-83. "We have the finest amateur basketball players in the world here. It's a tragedy, almost, to have the best teams and not make an effort to have the finest officials. It would not happen in track and field."

Nissalke was particularly angered by an intentional foul called against guard Butch Lee, as he drove for a basket in the first half.

"It was silly," said the coach. "That's two idiotic calls we've had in two games. The other night, they called a foul when one of our players walked about 10 feet behind the free-throw shooter. Stupid."

Nissalke, a long-time professional coach who will guide the Houston Rockets next season, wondered about the qualifications of the tournament officials.

Vladimir Heger, Czech coach, agreed:

"The players and coaches work constantly," he said. "Some of them practice three times a day. But these officials have regular jobs, and may not be involved in basketball more than once or twice a week. That's not enough. You can't stay in shape that way."

Heger said the international game requires younger, more dedicated officials.

"Even if you practice three times a day, you can't be in the same shape today as you were 10 years ago. And now, the basketball is much faster and rougher than it has ever been before. The biggest problem of basketball now is the officiating."

Wednesday night, U.S. coach Dean Smith questioned officiating that resulted in 11 fouls called on the three American centres in the first half of their game against Yugoslavia.

"We're not used to having the offensive pivot hold the defensive man, and then have the defensive man get the foul," Smith said.

A Big Surprise In Water Polo

MONTREAL (CP)— Canada got two goals from Paul Pottier and good goaltending from Guy LeClerc Thursday to defeat Australia 4-3 and assure themselves of at least 10th place in the Olympic Games.

And the Canadian team, which had never won an Olympic game before this year, is confident it can finish impressively.

"We play Cuba, Iran and Mexico and we should win two," siad Gaetan Turcotte of Quebec City. 'Iran we will beat, Mexico we want to because in the last five games against them they have won all by one goal. Against Cuba if we play well we can win."

The win gives Canada 10th place, and qualifies them for the 1978 world championships.

"The team played collectively today," coach Dezco Lehmenyi said after the win evened Canada's record at 2-2. "They were moving the ball well, getting into free positions and shooting.

"There are no stars on this team but today LeClerc was very good and probably the difference."

LeClerc, of Montreal, made two big stops early and that seemed to fire up the Canadians who came back with two first-period goals and took a 3-0 lead in the third before Australia scored twice on penalty shots.

The teams traded fourth-period goals and Canada twice killed off penalties to take the win.

Guyanan Wanted In As an Individual

MONTREAL (CP) — The International Olympic Committee (IOC) announced Thursday it has refused an application by 23-year-old James Gilkes, a top sprinter on Guyana's Olympic team, to compete in the Games on an individual basis despite his country's withdrawal earlier this week.

An IOC statement said Gilkes' application was refused "since his entry was withdrawn by the national Olympic committee of Guyana with those of the entire team.

"Such a case is not provided for in the IOC rules but will be studied for the future."

The announcement came within minutes of a hastily called news conference Thursday afternoon at which Gilkes and his coach, Whity Taylor, handed copies of a letter submitted to IOC Wednesday.

It requested the IOC's permission "to compete in the 21st Olympic Games under the insignia of the IOC or any other designation you would deem appropriate."

Gilkes contended that if the IOC had given the Taiwanese team the option of competing under the Olympic banner, then it should allow him as an individual competitor to do the same.

"They say one thing and do another," said a visibly upset Gilkes when he was informed of the decision.

Several Island Locations Boast Excellent Fishing

Sport salmon fishing continues to be excellent in waters from Sooke to Oak Bay, at the mouth of Alberni Inlet and off Campbell River, but some other Vancouver Island areas might also be worth a try this weekend.

Charlie Rushton topped fishermen working the vicinity of Secretary Island this week with two nice chinooks weighing 37½ and 19⅛ pounds taken Tuesday on a hootchie-type lure.

Many limits of coho to eight pounds have also been weighed in with just about any type of lure or bait working when trolled near the surface.

The Gap at Secretary and Otter Point have been the choice spots and a few sockeye to seven pounds are starting to show.

Chinooks to 30 pounds, coho to eight and a few sockeye to six are providing brisk action at Becher Bay.

Most success has been on Squirts, minnows, anchovies and strip fished at the 40 to 60-foot depth between Church Rock and the Trap Shack.

Pedder Bay guide Ed Bradford tied into a 42¾-pounder in unusual fashion Tuesday night. He hooked the linker in the tail while fishing with strip in the Race.

But coho are providing most of the action at Pedder, outnumbering the chinooks about two-to-one. Among the many limit catches of coho were some eight and one-half pounders landed Sunday by F. H. Hauk, G. Thompson, and Martin Fowler.

* * *

Coho also form the majority of catches off the Victoria waterfront, where Gerry Anderson landed a 7.14-pounder Wednesdoy while trolling an anchovy near Church Point. Some chinooks to 13 pounds have also been taken.

Strip is the most popular bait and numerous catches have been taken by trolling right along the shore near Albert Head and off Brotchie Ledge.

Jeff Lough, 14, landed a 25½ pound chinook while spin-casting a Buzz Bomb off the rocks near Oak Bay Marina around 4 a.m. Tuesday and there was an unconfirmed report of a 38-pounder being landed early Wednesday.

Fishing around midnight with a Stingsilda in the same area last week, Ron McMicking landed three — 27½, 18 and 17 pounds — out of the seven he hooked.

Seventeen-year-old Con Dietiker took his first salmon around 9 p.m. Sunday while spin-casting along the town side of Sidney Spit. He took the 20-pounder on a four-inch narrow green Buzz Bomb.

Mill Bay and Coles Bay are providing fair catches only but action has heated up in Finlayson Arm, where chinooks to 30 and the odd coho to five are biting Squirts, minnows and strip.

Further up-Island, Bold Bluff waters are still yielding chinooks to 20 pounds by either mooching or trolling with strip and both Tent Island and Porlier Pass have provided good catches of slightly smaller chinooks.

Limit catches of coho to eight pounds are being boated off the Ballenas Islands on hootchies or strip. Entrance Island and Snake Island waters are yielding chinooks to 20 pounds and fair catches of jacks and small coho are coming in from Five Fingers.

* * *

Swale Rock continues to be the hot spot at the mouth of Alberni Inlet although some excellent returns are coming in along the Bamfield side. Fishermen casting Stingslidas are landing chinooks to 40 pounds and coho that tip the scales to 12.

Winds have plagued fishermen near Courtenay but a few chinooks to 20 pounds are reported off Hornby Island.

Chinooks averaging 10 to 20 pounds and sometimes ranging to 40 pounds are providing excellent catches from Seymour Narrows to the Cam Buoy and off Willow Point at Campbell River. Strip, deeply-trolled in a herrring head with no flasher, is the main producer.

Green flies and flashtails trolled along the surface between the Cam Buoy and Mitlenatch Island are provoking strikes from coho to eight pounds and many limits have been reported.

* * *

Freshwater fishermen will likely find better-than-average success in Cowichan, McIvor, Lower Campbell, Upper Campbell, Pye, Stella, Roberts, Armor and Mohun lakes.

A few summer-run steelhead to 12 pounds have been landed in the Nitinat River and the upper section of the Cowichan River continues to produce a few large brown trout.

Blacker the Fish — Better the Day for Fishing

One Word Describes Lions

CAL MURPHY
. . . not pleasant

By Canadian Press

Head coach Cal Murphy of the British Columbia Lions used just one word to sum up his teom's 35-8 thrashing at the hands of Saskatchewan Roughriders Thursday night—sickening.

The powerful Roughriders rolled up a 32-0 half-time advantage on their way to an easy win in what was the season opener for both Western Football League clubs.

In another Canadian Football League game, quarterback Chuck Ealey piloted Toronto Argonauts to a 22-16 win over his former teammates, the Winnipeg Blue Bombers, in season opening action for those two teams.

Murphy agreed that the humiliating loss boiled down to the fact that the Lions just weren't prepared.

The Lions, who managed only six first downs, were manhandled by the Roughriders throughout the evening. Rookie quarterback John Sciarra, harassed throughout the game by Saskatchewan's front four, led by George Wells, completed just three of 16 pass attempts for only 31 yards.

The Roughrilers first-half rampage began with a single off the foot of Bob Macoritti early in the first quarter.

The Lions held on for a few more minutes, then the floodgates opened. Paul Williams scored on a 28-yard return of an interception of Sciarra's first regular-season professional pass. Within less than two minutes the elusive Tom Campana returned a punt for an 80-yard touchdown romp and the Lions were down for good.

Rhett Dawson, on a 10-yard pass from Ron Lancaster, and Steve Molnar, filling in ably the retired George Reed, scored second quarter touchdowns for Saskatchewan.

Macoritti converted all touchdowns, as well as adding two field goals.

Lions' only touchdown was set up by a fake punt in which slotback Terry Bailey rambled for 37 yards. Four plays later Sciarra passed 10 yards to rookie Lui Passaglia. The Lions got two points with seven seconls remaining in the game when Macoritti was forced to concede a safety.

In Winnipeg, play was generally unexciting until both teams came alive in the fourth quarter, when the Argonauts 12-1 lead was threatened early as Steve Baird capped a short drive following an interception with a touchdown run.

Ealey threw a touchdown strike to Al Bloomingdale in the second quarter, while Zenon Andrusyshyn converted both touchdowns and added a pair of field goals and two singles.

Bomber scoring was rounded out by Gord Patterson's 15-yard touchdown reception from Ralph Brock, Ernie Ruoff's 56-yard single and convert, and a two-point convert on a pass from Harry Knight to Patterson.

The win gives Saskatchewan a share of firhst place in the WFC. They are tied with Edmonton, which defeated Calgary 24-22 Tuesday in the CFL season-opener.

There are no CFL games scheduled until next week, when Montral is at Saskatchewan on Monday, Winnipeg is at Ottawa on Tuesday, Edmonton is at Toronto on Wednesday, Montreal is at Calgary on Thursday and British Columbia is host to Hamilton on Friday.

Al Millard played a leading role Thursday night as Triangle captured the Greater Victoria Little League baseball championship with an 11-5 victory over Hampton in the final at Hampton Park.

It was the first-ever victory for the Colwood-Langford entry and capped an unbeaten march through the double-loss elimination tournament.

Millard hurled a four-hitter from the mound and came up with two singles and a two-run homer in the second inning to score a total of three times and drive in two other runs.

Other major contributions to the 15-hit Triangle attack were made by Steve Smith, who had two singles and a triple to drive in three runs, and Guy Spencer, who came up two doubles and a single to score three runs.

Triangle now advances to the British Columbia tournament starting Sunday in Port Coquitlam.

SOFTBALL SCENE

Royal Oak Wins

Royal Oak Sporting Goods appears to be back on track.

Ken Fox hurled a two-hitter to lead runner-up Royal Oak to a 6-0 shutout over leading Seaboard Construction in a Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League game Thursday night at Central Park.

Seaboard won the last game between the two clubs after Royal Oak had beaten both Seaboard and third-place Ingraham Hotel in previous games this seaon.

Royal Oak moved to within one point of Seaboard as the Cliff Bate-coached team continued its domination over leading contenders.

Fox struck out eight batters and allowed only singles in the third and seventh while yielding three walks.

Third-baseman Dennis Eckert set the batting pace for Royals with a leadoff home run in the second inning and a double in the fourth to score twice and drive in two runs.

At Hyacinth Park, GSV Combos ended Stockers North Americans' unbeaten streak at 23 games by defeating the Victoria Senior Women's League leaders, 1-0.

Carol Newcomb hurled a two-hitter and survived five errors to gain the shutout during the final scheudled game for Stockers.

In Heywood Men's League play, Chris Jones slammed out a leadoff homer in the sixth inning to give Hygrade Radio a 1-0 decision over Castle Properties in one of the tightest games of the season at Heywood Avenue Park.

THURSDAY DEADLINE IN TENNIS

Competitors in the third annual Victoria Times Public Parks Tennis Tournament are reminded that all third-round (and some remaining second-round) matches must be played and the scores in by 5 p.m. next Thursday.

With less than a week remaining till that deadline, there are still 27 results to come, involving 10 matches in the men's singles event, five in the boys' and four matches in each of the women's and girls' singles and the mixed doubles.

These matches must be played as there are still quite a few rounds to get through before the tournament finals day on Saturday, Sept. 4.

Funk Holds World Title

Gene Kiniski failed in his bid to dethrone world champion Terry Funk by being disqualified in the feature bout of a professional wrestling card Thursday night at Memorial Arena.

Victoria Girls Share Lead in Junior Event

RICHMOND (CP — Four competitors, two from Victoria and two from the Interior, were tied for the lead after the first round Thursday of the two-day B.C. junior women's golf championship.

Sydney Thomson and Tracy Pierpoint of Victoria, Patti Murray of Vernon and Laura Iwasaki of Kamloops all fired 80s under wet conditions at the par-72 Greenacres golf course.

While the four top scorers took a good lead in the championship medal play, Miss Pierpoint and Lisa Young of Prince Rupert, who carded an 83 Thursday, had the best chances of being among the three selected after the tourney to represent B.C. at the national championships at Regina Aug. 15-19.

Their performances in four prior tournaments gave them the lead in the standings for team selection.

A Double Value For Car Drivers

Super-stock drivers will compete in the 19th annual running of the 65-lap race for the July Cup, which is a double point event.

Price took over the lead from Bob Collins with a victory in the last double points event — the Roy White Memorial race on June 12. He picked up 200 points that night while Collins blew an engine in time trials.

The leader now has 1,013 points and three feature victories this season while Collins, who has won five feature races, has 935. Jim Caudwell, winner of the other two main events this year, is third in standings with 777.

In the hobby stock division, which shares the Saturday program, Bill Hitchcox still has a commanding lead with 1,247 points.

WEST INDIES BATSMEN EXPLOSIVE

LEEDS, England (Reuter) — Roy Fredericks and Gordon Greenidge led the West Indian cricketers on a Caribbean fiesta of exuberant batting at its best on the opening day against England in the fourth test here Thursday.

On a perfect wicket and with a lightning fast outfield Fredericks and Greenidge scored flashing centuries as the England bowlers toiled in the sun at Headingly.

In the last 90 minutes, the England attack made a breakthrough, but not before the West Indians were assured of another big score and at close of play they had made 437 for nine.

Fredericks hit 18 fours and Greenidge smashed two sixes and 14 fours in their centuries. Fredericks, 109, and Greenidge 115, had a brilliant opening partnership of 192 in 156 minutes.

Greenidge was only the fifth batsman to make centuries in three successive innings against England and by way of celebration he hit Derek Underwood for a huge six into the stands to reach 500 for the series. His test aggregate for the year is already 1381, which equals the record of Australian Bobby Simpson.

Lister's Streak At Five

Gerry Lister came up with some solid relief pitching Thursday to collect his fifth straight win of the season and spark Kubicek's Home Service to a 3-1 victory over Farmer Constructin at Lambrick Park.

Lister struck out five batters, wallked two and yielded only three hits after relieving Wayne Messer in the fourth inning.

Blair Kubicek started off a two-run sixt hinning rally for Kubiceks drawing a walk, stealing second and scoring on Duane Pack's two-out single. Pack gained second on the throw to home plate and scored the insurance run on a throwing error.

AT EXHIBITION PARK

No Racing Thursdays

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Jockey Club has cancelled the nine remaining Thursday racing dates at Exhibition Park.

"The cancellation can be traced to lack of interest by the public to the two Thursdays staged last month," presiding-steward Merv Peters said Thursday.

"The betting was down well below our daily average and the extra days hurt the handle on the Friday and Saturday's of the same week," he said, adding that he does not think the horse population is large enough to support racing five times a week.

The B.C. Racing Commission has been officially notified of the change, races will continue to be held Monday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday.

New Start for Arnie?

Palmer, whose Open victory in 1955 was his first professional win, was one stroke behind 1973 Canadian amateur champion George Burns after Thursday's opening round of the $200,000 tournament.

Burns matched the Essex Golf and Country Club's course record with a five-under par 65. Tied with Palmer at 66 was Jerry Heard.

Asked what victory would mean to him, the 46-year-old Palmer said: "It would take me all night to tell you.

"The Canadian Open was my first tour win, and to win 21 years later, well . . . It might get me started again."

Palmer, the game's outstanding player in the late 1950s and early 1960s, has gone since 1973 without a tour victory.

Most of the 147 professionals, in pursuit of a $40,000 top prize, and three amateurs found the 6,696-yard Essex layout to their liking.

The opening round produced 43 scores of par or better, including a 69 by Toronto's George Knudson.

Knudson, returning to the Professional Golfers' Association tour after three wins in four tries on the Canadian professional circuit, said: "It was a good round for me."

"The greens are so good I don't think 65 will lead," said Burns, who is making his debut on the U.S. tour this year after winning professional tournaments in Sweden and Ireland last year.

A double-bogey six on the final hole cost Heard a chance for the first-round lead. A scorching 29 on the first nine, including six birdies, put him alone in the lead and he stayed there except for one hole until the double bogey.

Heard has been struggling since he missed 13 tour weeks with a bad back. He didn't return to action until mid-June.

"I putted well," he said of Thursday's round. "Even the double bogey didn't upset me."

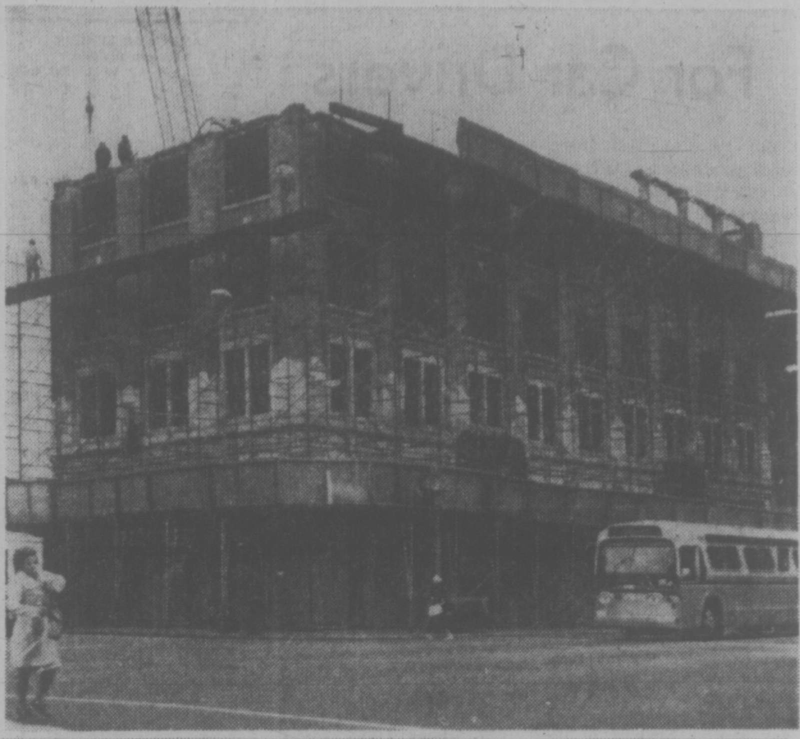
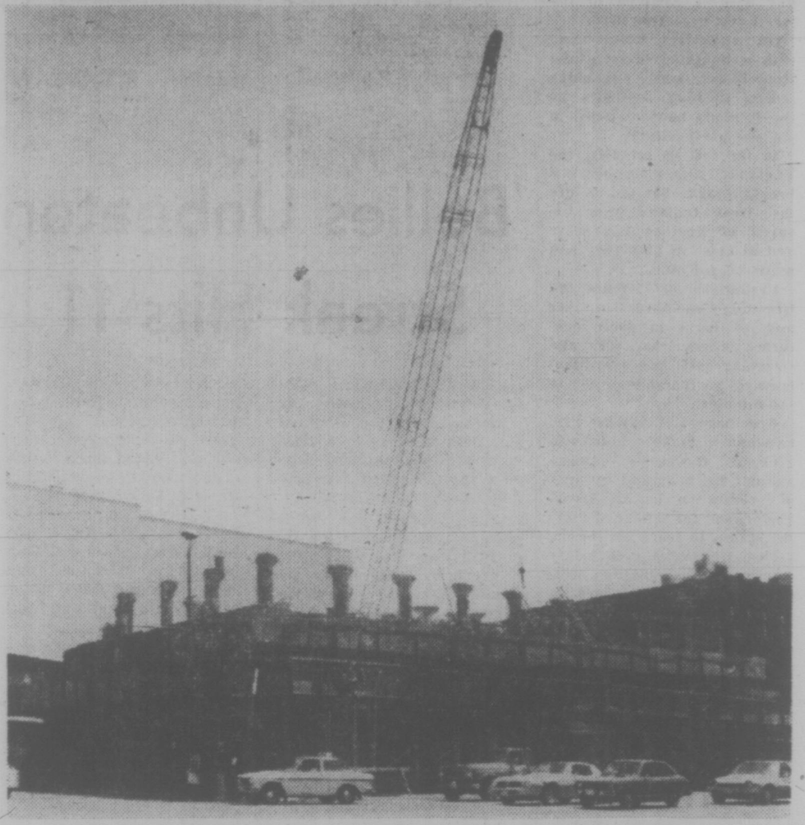
NOW you see it, now you don't. The neat disappearing trick on the old Campbell Building at Douglas and Fort looks easy through the lens of Times photographer Bill Halkett, but for an eight-man demolition crew from Johnston Terminals it meant weeks of tricky, painstaking work. For the piece-by-piece dismantling job they had a scant leeway of only five feet on each sidewalk frontage. The 120-foot highrise, Victoria's tallest building when it was built in 1912, will be replaced by a new skyscraper housing the main Victoria branch of the Royal Bank.





Tornado, Hail Break Drought In Europe

LONDON (UPI) — Europe's drought of the century collapsed Thursday in spectacular tornadoes over Italy, snow in the German Alps, wintery rain in France and traditional gentle showers and drizzle in Britain.

But in most of the parched continent, the cooler temperatures and moisture came too late to save crops, livestock and water supplies depleted by months of dry weather.

In southern Germany, 12,000 head of cattle were slaughtered Wednesday because the drought had burned up the fodder to feed them. Local farmers predicted the worst harvest in almost 30 years.

The rain and cooler temperatures covering most of the country were accompanied by midsummer snow on Alpine slopes over 5,600 feet.

British authorities worked on plans to restrict domestic water usage in the London area from midnight Friday. South Wales already was without water 13 hours a day in order to conserve supplies.

The Thames River Valley Water Authority said the nation was at the low point of a 250-year drought cycle.

The drought went out in spectacular fashion in Italy. A storm front moved southward across the nation, bringing rain, hail, tornadoes and lightning.

Tornadoes hit Genoa and Livorno, uprooting trees and roofs and tossing cars across streets. Genoa had 3 inches of rain in two hours.

A heavy downpour in the Friuli region flooded tent cities sheltering 45,000 refugees still homeless from an earthquake in May.

Egg-sized pieces of hail rattled down for 45 minutes on the Chianti vineyards around Florence, causing an estimated $1.5 million damage. Windstorms also badly damaged several vineyards in the Valpolicella area around Verona in northern Italy.

In France, the cold rain belt brought relief to fire-ravaged forests. More than 100,000 acres of woodland have burned since the start of the year.

The rain also brought hope of saving crops that had been feared lost in the dry spell. Jean-Francois Saglio, appointed to coordinate emergency anti-drought measures, said he was cautiously optimistic.

NUCLEAR 'SAFETY' BARED

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Staff members of a large nuclear reactor in India once discovered that a mental patient had broken into a control room and was throwing switches, according to memos, which are part of the record at the nuclear regulatory commission hearing on future nuclear sales to India, described the incident.

It occurred in 1969 at the large light-water nuclear reactor at Tarapur, which supplies much of the power for Bombay.

One memo said:

"We have been informed of an incident which involved possible attempted sabotage. An unauthorized individual gained access to the switch gear room which contained the emergency power system local panels and rendered the system inoperable by manipulation of several switches. If an off-site power failure had occurred during the period of inoperability virtually all normal equipment and most engineered safety system would have been inoperable."

The "unauthorized individual" was described in another memo as a local resident "with a record of mental disturbance."

Red Cross Rescue On

Times News Services

BEIRUT — A Red Cross convoy entered the beseiged Tal Zaatar Palestinian refugee camp today to begin removing close to 1,000 people wounded in a month of fighting.

Five previous attempts by the Red Cross to get inside the camp were turned back by renewed shelling.

"This is a test case," said Red Cross spokesman Jean Hoefliger. "We only intend bringing out about 10 wounded today, but if it goes smoothly we'll think about bringing out the others over the next few days."

A Red Cross truck and several cars, accompanied by Arab League officials, passed through Christian seige lines — escorted by rightist gunmen.

Amin Gemayl, the militia chieftan of the right-wing Phalangist party, said the Christians agreed to let the Red Cross enter the camp "in an attempt to make the war more humane."

As the medical convoy crossed the treacherous "green line" line separating East and West Beirut and headed for the camp, residents crowded onto balconies along the route and shouted "Bravo, bravo."

The agreement allowing the evacuation was reached Thursday night by Arab League envoy Hassan Sabry Kholi, who accompanied the convoy.

It was part of a larger peace package in which Arab League peace-keeping troops will gradually extend their buffer zone along the "green line" to the Beirut port, 1.5 miles away.

"We are going to have a step-by-step policy to ensure respect for the cease-fire," Kholi said.

Kholi said two key rightist chieftains agreed to allow the league's white-helmeted troops to move 600 yards deeper into Christian territory today.

19 Arrested

Peninsula Water Ideas Abound

The old maxim apparently came in useful this week at a meeting of the Peninsula Water Committee, in achieving a measure of consensus where otherwise there was little.

Commitee chairman and North Saanich Ald. George Westwood said today the one point on which all representatives agreed is that some form of water authority or commission is needed to provide a bulk water supply to the Saanich Peninsula.

But there is a wide range of opinion on the type of authority required, he said.

Deep Cove felt the body should come under the aegis of the Capital Regional District, with responsibility for both water supply and distribution.

North Saanich and Sidney representatives went along with the first part of that viewpoint, but insisted that the commission be responsible for the supply function only, with individual municipalities undertaking distribution.

Central Saanich and Brentwood thinking, however, favored the concept of a peninsula water authority completely separate from the regional district. This would handle supply while the existing peninsula agencies — muncipalities and water districts — would look after distribution. In other words, another level of government would be created.

Westwood said the broadly-worded resolution which finally won majority approval said merely that a peninsula water authority be established by legislation.

He said this will be relayed to Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis, whose stipulated deadline for peninsula consensus expires at the end of this month. Individual submissions embodying the various views expressed at the meeting will also be forwarded.

Although he doesn't know what the next step wil be, Westwood said it's quite likely that Curtis will summon the representatives to another meeting.

However, Sidney Mayor Peter Malcolm seems skeptical that any agreement can be thrashed out at the local level. He believes individual municipalities are still too far apart on the issue, and the Peninsula Water Committee isn't tackling the guts of the problem.

"The water committee is an ad hoc committee living up to its repurtation of accomplishing absolutely nothing," he added.

Lindholm Decision Month Away

NANAIMO (CP) — The Lindholm inquiry commission, which this week completed hearings into the contract dispute between the Canadian Union of Public Employees and the Mid-Island Public Employers' Association, may not have its decision implemented until the end of next month.

The five-man commission was established by Labor Minister Allan Williams to bring down a binding decision in the dispute, which resulted in a 10-week strike-lockout in the Nanaimo-Ladysmith area earlier this year.

Louis Lindholm of Victoria, chairman of the commission, said he expects the commission will give its report to he labor minister by July 30.

Joe Kilner, president of MIPEA, said it could be mid-August or even the beginning of September before the commission's decision is put into effect.

The commission began meeting June 9 at the end of the strike by three CUPE locals: 401 representing the city of Nanaimo and the regional district, the parks and recreation commission and the town of Ladysmith; 606 representing School District 68; and 1858 representing Malaspina College.

Communist Eastern Europe Deep In Red to Western Treasuries

By MICHAEL GETLER
Washington Post

BONN — The huge financial debt to Western treasuries being piled up by Communist Eastern Europe is attracting increased attention and some concern among both bankers and government leaders in Western Europe.

Economic specialists here estimate the total debt to the West for trade and credits of the Soviet Union and other Eastern bloc countries is now above $32 billion, a jump of about $10 billion in one year.

The latest note of caution came in a report released by the West German Federal Bundesbank which reported that, despite a slight dip in Germany's trade surplus with the East in the first quarter of this year, the collective East European debt to Wes Germany alone remains "extraordinarily high" at about $8 billion.

"It is not the actual amount that is worrisome, but rather the rapid rate of growth and the question of how far it should be allowed to go," says one senior West German government official.

"It is not just a matter of helping them finance bad harvests and some long-term growth in their economies," adds another economics specialist.

"Now it becomes a question of whether the Western nations are financing quite a bit of economic leeway and investment for the other side, and freeing other resources of theirs to go into more armaments."

Another point raised by government officials is that the substantial Western credits to these already developed countries might be easier to accept if the Eastern bloc did more in transfering developmental aid — rather than arms — to underdeveloped countries.

Though Bundesbank officials stress that they see no real danger for Western banks in the heavy borrowing thus far, they also acknowledge privately that the subject of the massive debt is "more and more discussed" and that it is clear that the rate of increase "can't go on."

Officials here, however, foresee still more heavy borrowing again this year as poor grain harvests are forecast again in much of Eastern Europe.

Specialists say the total Eastern debt probably has grown to about $35 billion since the first of this year, and they do not quarrel with a recent estimate of West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt that it might reach $45 billion by the end of the year.

Of the roughly $32 billion estimated debt at the end of 1975, officials believe about one-third of that — some $11 billion — is accounted for by the Soviet Union. The indebtedness of the rest of Eastern Europe, as it imports Western goods and technology, has more than tripled in the past five years, they add.

To the extent that there is concern in banking circles, it is over credit worthiness of individual countries as opposed to concern over the more global East-West strategy issues raised by government leaders.

There is little worry about loan guarantees from the Soviet Union, which is rich in natural resources and gold. There is more concern about countries such as Poland, Romania and East Germany. Poland and Romania, however, appear to be making successful efforts to reduce their balance of payments deficits in recent months, according to Bundesbank figures.

Sources say many Western governments actually were caught by surprise by the dimensions of the Eastern debt.

It was only after a report by New York's Chase Manhattan Bank earlier this year first surfaced the $32 billion estimate that many top officials realized how fast the debt had been growing.

Since then, officials acknowledge, the progress is watched closely. The matter also was discussed at the economic summit of major Western powers in Puerto Rico last month.

While there is still no general strategy or general agreement at the top on how, if at all, to react to the situation, sources say there is agreement to pay more attention and stay in closer contact, in part to avoid surprises.

Many functions of Aurora are demonstrated in artist's conception

Collier Jubilant Over Aurora

The commander of Maritime Forces Pacific is jubilant over the government's $1 billion contract to purchase 18 anti-submarine aircraft from Lockheed.

In an interview, Rear Admiral A. L. Collier said the new Aurora plane will increase the Armed Forces surveillance capability by more than 60 per cent and will give Canada the most modern, sophisticated anti-submarine aircraft in the world.

He said the planes should roll off the Lockheed assembly plant in California sometime in 1979 with the first planes arriving here a year later.

Eventually, four Aurora planes will be based at Comox, he said, replacing the six aging Argus aircraft which have been carrying out surveillance over the Pacific for the past 20 years.

Collier said compared with the Argus the Aurora will be smoother to operate, quieter, amd nearly twice as fast, with a cruising speed of 350 to 400 knots. The range will be roughly the same — about 4,000 miles without refuelling.

Collier said the aircraft will be primarily used to monitor the movements of Russian submarines, but will also assist in fisheries patrol, pollution surveillance, search and rescue operations and patrols over the Arctic observing movements of ice stations, shipping, and wildlife.

He said the Aurora will use the airframe of the Orion anti-submarine plane but will be a generation ahead of the latter.

Collier said if the order for the new aircraft hadn't gone through Canada would have been in "serious trouble" as the Argus has become obsolete and is too expensive to maintain.

Not everyone shares Collier's enthusiasm. In a press release Wednesday the Esquimalt-Saanich federal New Democratic Party Association condemned the purchase.

"The expenditure of $1 billion over an unspecified number of years will limit severly the purchase of equipment for the expansion of the peaceful role of Canada's defence forces," the release said.

"Victoria in particular will suffer from the decision. Bases on Vancouver Island are especially in need of equipment for civilian protection and the channelling of this huge amount of defence dollars into one single purchase will surely prevent this needed reequipping as well as leading to the reduction of the present level of manpower."

DECAY FLUORIDE REDUCED

TORONTO (CP) — A public health study concludes that tooth decay in some young children has been cut in half by adding fluoride to Metropolitan Toronto water.

The study, conducted by Dr. D. W. Lewis, chairman of the community dentistry department at the University of Toronto, shows that the younger a child was when Metro Toronto began putting fluoride in its water in 1963, the higher his chances of not having cavaties.

For children aged fove, seven and nine, tooth decay — of their deciduous or baby teeth — was reduced by 50 per cent. For permanent teeth, the reduction in decay was 44 per cent, the study showed.

The reduction of five-year-olds who are free of cavities has doubled since 1963.

For children over 13, who would have been born before the fluoridation program began, the study found that an average of three teeth were attacked by decay in 1974 whereas in 1964 the average was more than five.

Dr. Lewis said fluoridation costs less than 12 cents a year per person and greatly reduces the cost of dental care.

He discounted the possibility that factors other than fluoride might have brought about the reductions. In studies of communities without fluoridation, a similar decrease in tooth decay was not found, he said.

Dr. George Moss, Toronto medical officer of health, said Dr. Iewis' study has fully vindicated the controversial decision to adopt fluoridation in 1963. The move was taken after along series of legal fights, legislatiye disputes and a referendum that favored the program by a slim margin.

Soviet Skipper Found Drowned

JARROW, England (AP) — The body of a Soviet freighter captain who disappeared shortly before he was to sail home was found in the River Tyne with a large brass weight tied to the belt, police reported. They said Captain Anatole Mankevitch drowned either as a result of suicide or an accident and ruled out the possibility of foul play.

Japan-China Relations Take Diplomatic Dive

By JOHN SAAR
Washington Post

TOKYO — Obscure, in origin, striking with the sudden power of a Pacific typhoon, a major diplomatic dispute has sent Japan's relations with China tumbling to their lowest level since the two countries resumed normal ties four years ago.

Established facts are few and confusing, but the Tokyo Foreign Ministry Tuesday confirmed that China has officially protested statements the Japanese foreign minister, Kiichi Miyazana, supposedly made in a private meeting with U.S. Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield July 12.

Mansfield was visiting Japan on a foreign plicy fact-finding mission for Democratic presidential candidate Jimmy Carter. Japanese newspapers later reorted Miyazawa warned him against cancellation of the U.S. security treaty with Taiwan or any sudden or drastic change in Sino-American relations.

On Monday, a Chinese foreign ministry official summbned Japanese Ambassador Heishiro Ogawa to express China's "serious regret" over Miyazawa's comments. The criticisms were angrily amplified Tuesday by the official new China News Agency, which condemned Miyazawa for interference in China's internal affairs and for departing from the Japan-China joint communique of 1972, which acknowledged Taiwan as part of China.

The many clues, puzzles and false trails in the affair would tax the most avid diplomatic sleuth. Chief among the difficulties is ascertaining with any certainty what Miyazawa did or did not say.

Mansfield on arrival stated through an aide his unvarying custom of not meeting the press during foreign trips and so far as is known kept his own counsel. Members of the Japanese foreign ministry "press club" were briefed by a diplomat — some say it was Miyazawa himself — and stories highly damaging to Japan-China relations appeared the day following the meeting.

Miyazawa tried to clear the air by testifying to a Diet (parlimaentary) committee on what he had meant to tell Mansfield — that Japan would not intervene in bilateral affairs between China and America. In referring to the desirability of no sudden changes, he was merely approving President Ford's comment along those lines to Premier Takeo Miki on June 30, the foreing minister said.

The explanatin plainly did not sell in Peking, and the official People's Daily accused Miyazawa Monday of advocating "two Chinas."

Whether publication of Miyazawa's statements was deliberate policy or "an accident — a diplomatic blunder" as one well-informed source asserts, the incident will certainly further delay negotiations on a peace and friendship treaty between Japan and China. The talks have been deadlocked over Chinese insistence on an anti-hegemony clause directed at the Soviet Union.

Some analysts believe that with political uncertainties prevalent in both Tokyo and Peking, Miyazawa gambled there was little to be lost in offending the Chinese. This view holds Miyazawa does not want to see the United States break off diplomatic and defence relations with China without first securing Peking's agreement not to liberate the island republic by invasion.

Pre-presidential campaign talk of hastening diplomatic normalization with Peking has left the Japanese edgy over their investments in Taiwan and the importance of its survival of the power balance in the region.

Withe equal confidence, other theorists insist that Miyazawa's real concern is that a precipitous American withdrawal from Taiwan would open more of the region to Soviet fleet manoeuvres.

The Chinese have interpreted Miyazawa's words as a gratuitous insult: "I don't understand why he did this," said a noted professor of international relations, "It will be seriously costly. Mr. Miyazawa will be persona non grata to China and Japanese diplomats will have trauble negotoating in Peking and Tokyo."

The Old Heroes Give Way

NEW YORK (UPI) — It used to be you could ask a kid for his favorite hero and be reasonably sure of coming up with a president, a well-known scientist, or at least a centrefold or two. Not any more.

A nationwide survey of some 500 pupils in fifth through 12th grades conducted by the Ladies Home Journal turned up an odd assortment of "top 50" hero figures, including porno star Linda Lovelace and convicted mass murderer Charles Manson.

Football star O. J. Simpson was tops among both girls and boys surveyed by the Journal and headed the composite list of 50 heroes and heroines published in the magazine's August edition.

State Secretary Henry Kissinger, who has headed many adult "most admired" lists, apparently carries little weight with the teens. He was the top-ranking politician, but still placed only ninth on the composite roster.

President Ford finished 13th, between Katharine Hepburn and Pearl Bailey.

Bob Dylan and Abbie Hoffman, folk heroes to youngsters of the '60s, ranked 21st and 47th respectively in the poll. Miss Lovelace placed 40th and Manson 44th.

The rankings were made by the teen-agers earlier this year from a checklist of 150 names, with the youngsters rating each figure five through one according to hero status and marking unfamiliar names with a zero, a magazine spokesman said.

The checklist originally was compiled by Journal editors and then revised, based on "depth" tape-recorded interviews with some 125 boys and girls, the spokesman said.

FBI Secretary Admits Forgery

WASHINGTON (WP) — An FBI secretary has testified that, under instructions from John P. Nohr, she signed the and the estate of J. Edgar name of associate FBI director Clyde A. Tolson to docuthen-assistant FBI director over both Tolson's finances Hoover.

Dorothy S. Skillman, who was Tolson's secretary at the FBI, testified that shortly after Hoover died in May, 1972 — leaving an inheritance of more than $500,000 to Tolson — Mohr brought her a power of attorey and a bank agreement and told her that Tolson wanted her to sign his name to them.

She testified, in a court deposition filed last week, that she went ahead and signed Tolson's name to the documents giving Mohr control the matter with Tolson. Two other high FBI officials, Nicholos P. Callahan and James B. Alams, also signed the documents as witnesses to Tolson's signature.

Callahan has since testified in a court deposition that he doubted that the signature was actually Tolson's, even though it was "similar to signatures of his in the past," becouse he knew Tolson had had a stroke that enfeebled his writing hand.

Hoover had died on May 2, 1972, and Tolson had resigned from the FBI the next day. Tolson spent most of the next three years in virtual isolation at Hover's home, which was part of his inheritance until he also died on April 14, 1975.

Mohr, who had been the FBI's third ranking executive, resigned in June 1972. Callahan, who had become associate director, the number two FBI job, was fired last week by the present FBI director, Clarence Kelley. Adams is now in the number three FBI job.

Callahan and Mohr are among a number of present and former FBI officials who are now being investigated by the Justice Department in connection with allegations of financial corruption, according to government sources.

The power of attorney to which Dorothy Skillman testified she signed Tolson's name was dated May 22, 1972, and conveyed to Mohr complete control over Tolson's finances. The bank agreement, dated May 25, 1972, created an "agency account" under Mohr's control in the name of "J. Edgar Hoover Estate" at the trust department of the Riggs National Bank of Washington.

Sillman and Callahan have both testified about the signing of these documents in complex litigation over Tolson's estate. In sworn answers to interrogatories in this same litigation, Mohr has testified about the power of attorney that he has "no recollection of seeing this signed." He was not asked about the bank agreement.

BEEF, BIBLES IN SAME SHOP

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Jon Heil, owner manager and sole employee of the Better Beef and Bible store, says customers are bemused by his combination of merchandise, but that it doesn't stop them from buying.

For the last five weeks, he has been selling steaks and Bibles at his small shop in Portland, which is evenly divided between shelves of Christian literature and three large lockers of meat.

Heil, 28, says his fledging business is attracting more customers every day and he is able to support himself through his sales of "spiritual and physical food."

Printed Warnings Ordered On Popular Tranquilizers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Food and Drug Administration warned doctors Thursday that the most widely used tranquilizers—valium, librium, miltown and others — may cause cleft lip and other birth defects if taken during early pregnancy.

It ordered manufacturers of the drugs to begin carrying warnings to that effect in the form fo a statement printed in bold face on the packages.

Citing recent studies, FDA commissioner Alexander Schmidt said:

"These studies do not demonstrate conclusively that these drugs, taken during early pregnancy, can cause cleft lip or other birth defects.

"But use of these tranquilizers during pregnancy is rarely a matter of urgency, and their use during this time should almost always be avoided.

"The warning label we are now requiring will provide physicians with the information they need to prescribe these drugs safely."

Hoffman - LaRoche Inc., manufacturer of valium and librium, said the FDA in its order ignored two more recent studies which have cleared the tranquilizers of any link to birth defects.

A spokesman said the company does not quarrel with the FDA's statement that pregnanat women may not need tranquilizers,

'Adopt Horse' Program

GRAND JUNCTION, COLO. (AP) — A law designed to protect wild horses has been so effective that the U.S. government is promoting an adopt-a-horse program to keep wild mustangs from starving.

Overpopulation of the horses is so severe that the interior department has begun buying television advertisements to encourage people to adopt one.

However, adopting a horse is not an ideal solution for the horses or adoptive owners. A mustang's body chemistry is so delicate it sometimes dies when taken off the open range.

"About 80 to 90 per cent of the horses are extremely wild. and as a result they are quite dangerous," said Milton Frei, range conservationist with the federal bureau of land management in Denver.

The 1971 Wild Horse and Burro Act was designed to prevent the wild horses from being slaughtered and sold for dog food. There are about 50,000 wild horses and 10,000 wild burros in the U.S. West protected under the law.

Federal agencies say the lack of natural predators is one reason for the growth spurt in mustang herds. Frei said only the mountain lion attacks the horses, but it's not believed to kill many.

Municipalities Begged to Permit New Penitentiaries

Times Ottaa Bureau
By VICTOR MACKIE

OTTAWA — An appeal to the public to adopt a more "positive response" to the federal government's plans to build new prison institutions was voiced Thursday by Andre Therrien, Canadian Penitentiary Service Commissioner.

"Communities must take another long, sober look at allowing us to establish these institutions," he said.

"Our building program is now almost three years behind schedule. We need these new institutions to achieve our goals of control and resocialization of inmates. Without new faciltiies, it's almost impossible to implement the 'Living Unit Concept,' a program that teaches inmates to face their responsibilities and instills self respect," he said.

The commissioner made the comments following an administrative inquiry into the hostage taking incident at the British Columbia penitentiary Feb. 19. It revealed that the outdated penitentiary and over-population were the main factors responsible for the incident.

"The outdated facilities and over crowding seriously compromise the efficiency of the staff. The prevailing conditions make it difficult to react adequately under crisis conditions and the resulting frustrations lead to procedural difficulties" the report said.

The inquiry was established after three inmates seized three guards and held them hostage to various demands, including transfers to other penitentiaries. The inquiry is a normal procedure in the Penitentiary Service following such incidents.

The demand for a transfer to the Dorchester, New Brunswick, maximum security institution was granted because plans had already been made for the exchange of dangerous inmates and in the face of a threat to the lives of the hostages it was expedient to proceed with the transfer.

The periodical transfer of inmates from one institution to another is a normal administrative practice in the Canadian penitentiary service, said the commissioner.

All three hostages were released unharmed.

The commissioner said a more positive response on the part of the public towards the government's program to build new institutions would help bring an end to such incidents.

The proposed new institutions were deliberately designed to allow efficient inmate population control and deployment of staff.

"It's difficult to keep staff in over crowded older institutions and the resulting turnover means we are always in the process of training personnel," said Therrien.

"The system can only deteriorate if we are not allowed to have the tools we need to do the job," he said.

Mercury Levels Down In West

OTTAWA (CP) — The mercury levels in all but six of 61 river locations in Western Canada, once polluted by mercury from fungicides and industrial plants, have decreased below poison point since 1973, the federal environment department said Wednesday.

However, still above the federal standard of 0.2 micrograms per litre of water are the mercury levels in a creek down-ctream from a sewage lagoon in Regina, and in water around Thompson, Man., "where smelting activities have kept the mercury level constant for the last six years."

In the Yukon, high mercury levels still exist on three tributaries of the Pelly River near lead and zinc mines and one downstream from an abandoned gold mine.

"High concentrations of mercury compounds are detrimental to aquatic organisms and fish, and ultimately to man, so we are most encouraged by the drop in the number of problem locations," department spokesman J. P. Bruce said in a prepared statement.

His comment was based on a report from the department's inland waters section which tesfed running water in the Yukon, British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba.

In some areas the river sediments and fish are still contaminated by both natural mercury and mercury formerly used in now-banned fungicides to treat seed grain, or the now-outlawed emission of high levels of mercury from chlorine production plants. Other mercury was released through mining and some is simply present in oil and coal, escaping through seepage or combustion. "Man-induced releases of mercury into the aquatic environment in Western Canada are now probably less than those from natural sources and little further improvement can be expected," the report concludes.

Meanwhile, mercury concentration should diminish over the years as relatively mercury-free sediments gradually cover the layers of sediment that were poisoned.

Highlights of the report were released while the problems of mercury contaminated rivers in Ontario anl Quebec continue to plague the federal departments of the environment, fisheries, health and Indian affairs.

Wednesday's environment report said preparations are under way for a mercury study in the Atlantic region but "in Ontario and Quebec the responsibility for monitoring of mercury in river waters rests mainly with the provincial governments."

TV Film 'Offensive' ... And Illiterate

OTTAWA (CP) — The CBC apologized Thursday evening on national television for carrying "an offensive" film clip of "well-endowed" female Olympic athletes Monday night, a corporation official said.

Tim Knight, English radio and television news supervisor for the Ottawa area, said the apology was issued during a news report on a demonstration by about 40 persons, who peacefully protested their objections about the report earlier Thursday at CBC headquarters here.

The offending film clip, which also drew immediate protests from viewers, was called the "gluteus maximum awards" and concentrated on showing the chests of several female athletes at the Olympic village.

A CBC reporter, covering the demonstration Thursday, said during her report that "not only was the Latin phrase wrong, but the subject matter was a little dicey too."

Gluteus maximus is a medical term for buttocks.

The CBC apology called the film clip "offensive and unacceptable" and have warned corporation producers in Montreal to screen Olympic reports more carefully before allowing them to go on the air.

Pipeline Estimates Demanded

OTTAWA (CP) — Two companies seeking the right to build a northern natural gas pipeline have been ordered by the National Energy Board to file new cost estimates by Aug. 16.

The board ordered the new figures as part of its current hearings on applications by Foothills Pipelines Ltd. and Canadian Arctic Gas Pipeline Ltd. for the fight to build the line.

Earlier this year, Arctic Gas told the board its joint pipeline to carry Alaskan and Mackenzie Delta gas to domestic and U.S. markets would cost $7.5 billion for Canadias portions of the line.

Foothills said its line to carry only the Delta gas would cost $2.4 billion, but additional facilities needed by other associated companies would increase that to between $4 billion and $5 billion.

But both estimates were based on the value of the dollar in 1975.

The board has asked for new figures based on the value of the dollar in 1976, a move that likely will increase the cost estimates by about 10 per cent.

In the ruling, the board also said the applicants will have to file evidence on Canadian content and the impact of pipelines in the Canadian economy by Aug. 3.

But it agreed with a request by the Canadian Wildlife Federation to allow interested parties at the hearings to delay their filings on those issues until mid-November.

Cost of Living Jump Lowest in Vancouver

OTTAWA (CP) — Montrealers faced the largest rise in prices between May and June as the cost of living in that city jumped eight-tenths of one per cent, Statistics Canada reported.

A survey of prices in major cities, released monthly by the government agency, showed the smallest cost-of-living rises were in Edmonton and Vancouver, where prices climbed by only three-tenths of one per cent.

Prices in Victoria are considered the same or slightly higher than Vancouver.

Statistics Canada figures released last week showed the national increase in prices between May and June averaged five-tenths of one per cent, with the change from June, 1975, at 7.8 per cent, the smallest 12-month inflation in nearly three years.

The consumer price index for the cities shows that although Montreal had the largest month-over-month rise in prices in the 14 centres surveyed, its 12-month inflation was the smallest, at 6.9 per cent.

Vancouver faced the opposite situation, with its 10.6-per-cent rise in prices being the largest over 12 months, despite the relatively low rate of increase from May to June.

Statistics Canada said the main contibutors to inflation in Montreal were higher costs for both rented and owned housing and increased taxi fares. There were also higher prices for fresh fruit and bread and for liquor and wine consumed at home.

dear abby

Abby a Go-Between

DEAR ABBY: I am a respectable, married, God-fearing person. Something has been weighing heavily on my conscience for nearly 20 years, and I hear that you can help me to make things right with the Lord.

When I was between 12 and 13 years old, my mother was the church Ladies Aid treasurer. I used to take a dollar or two out of her "church purse" every now and then. I don't think she ever knew that money was missing. I figure that over the years I must have taken $25 or $30.

I want to give that money back to the church, but I don't want them to know where it came from. I heard that if I sent you a cheque for that amount, you would send the church your own cheque for the same amount without any mention of my name.

That way, they'd be paid back, and my conscience would be clear. Will you do it? God bless you.

GUILTY CONSCIENCE

DEAR GUILTY: Yes, I will. I have been the go-between for many who have stolen from their employers, friends, and even from their families. Make the cheque payable to me, and I will send my personal cheque to whomever you designate.

DEAR ABBY: I am a professional woman. I married five years ago and the marriage was going badly, so I adopted a child to hold the marriage together. That was a big mistake as I later learned.

We were divorced, and now I have met another man. He said he would marry me in a minute but he doesn't want a four-year-old daughter. He is 50, I am 40.

The child is adorable and she deserves to be in a home where she is wanted. Please don't think I am a terrible mother, but I honestly don't have the time for her and I wasn't cut out to be a mother.

I love this man and want to marry him. What should I do about my daughter? I will be the first to admit that I am — A POOR EXCUSE FOR A MOTHER.

DEAR POOR: At least you're honest, which is to your credit.

DAYCARE USAGE DOWN SOME IN B.C.

Daycare in B.C. is costing more while usage has declined slightly with a drop in employment opportunities.

Reduced daycare enrolment has been noticed in the Lower Mainland, other urban and some rural centres where unemployment has risen due to economic conditions, strikes and lockouts, according to the B.C. co-ordinator of daycare services for the department of human resources.

Marolin Dahl said the cost of salaries for daycare attendants and supervisors is the main reason for the need for higher government subsidies to parents who qualify for assistance.

Last year the maximum monthly subsidy available to a family for institutional daycare was $120, and $90 for placement of children in family daycare. These maximums were raised to $140 and $100, respectively, in the spring of 1976.

Most daycare service in B.C. is privately-run, either through some voluntary agency such as church or co-operative group on a profit or non-profit basis. There are only six metropolitan facilities fully supported by public financing — five in Vancouver and one in Victoria.

But none of the private operations receive a direct subsidy. Only parents who qualify on the basis of need can get government assistance to help pay monthly fees.

Salaries in daycare services range from $500-$800 a month for attendants — who must meet a provincial standard of proficiency — and from $600-$900 for supervisors.

Dahl said the cost of food is another factor where day-long care is involved.

But she also feels daycare is here to stay. When the economy and employment return to an even keel, more mothers will be employed full-time and the need for daycare services will grow.

There are already daycare services the length and breadth of British Columbia — from the Queen Charlotte Islands to Sparwood and from Sooke to the Peace.

Even when conditions are good it is becoming harder for one wage earner to support a family; two incomes per family have become commonplace, making some kind of parttime or full-time daycare necessary if there are young children.

Dahl sees the non-profit type of service in the ascendancy. It is "definitely a growing service," she said.

But she warns there is still a need for parents seeking such services to be sure they select the best available in their community, notwithstanding provincial standards of care.

Drying Fruit, Vegetables, Meat An Economical Way of Preserving

THE MOTHER EARTH NEWS'

To those of you who prefer home-grown fruits and vegetables — and also like to save money — home preservation of food is a major concern . . . and everyone has his or her favorite method.

There's one technique that's easy, economical and healthful — drying. Almost any edible — vegetable, fruit, herb, fish or meat — can be processed in this way, without additives, and the finished products won't support destructive bacteria (or even mold) as long as they're kept free of moisture. Besides that, dried foodstuffs require little storage space and only inexpensive containers.

You really have to remember only two ironclad rules: (1) The food must be clean; (2) Juicy fruits and vegetables must be cut in half, and are sometimes better quartered or sliced. The more moisture an item contains, the smaller you cut it.

Other predrying treatments — including blanching, sulphuring, dipping in salt water or adding sugar or honey — are said to help dried foods retain a better color and flavor. (Some authorities insist that low-acid vegetables must be blanched before dehydration to destroy spoilage-causing bacteria.)

Drying can be done in the oven when you want quickest results (fruits are ready to pack after only about six hours of such forced heat). Oven drying, however, causes a greater change in color and flavor than does the heat of the sun.

Outdoor drying can be done on folding tables covered with clean, light-colored paper. Cookie sheets, cake pans, wire racks or just plain butcher paper are all suitable surfaces on which to dry edibles, as long as the items to be dehydrated are placed far enough apart to allow the circulation of air.

Fruits seem to store especially well when sun-preserved, and a variety can be dried — apples, apricots, peaches, pears, cherries, chokecherries and crab apples.

Even watermelon can be dehydrated if it's spread thinly enough over a drying surface. Elderberries, serviceberries, currants and Oregon grapes all turn out beautifully too, ready for use in winter pies.

Fruits which are being dried must remain in direct sunlight for several hours of the day. They can be left out at night, if you're certain it won't rain, but they should be covered with a sheet. (Insects stay away from most food that's exposed to full sunlight, and then crawl all over it after sundown.)

Many vegetables also dry well: green beans, green peppers, squash, pumpkin, beets . . . even potatoes and carrots, although these are so easily stored for winter that there's little reason to process them. Though they store quite nicely when sun dried, Ole Sol does tend to bleach most green and yellow varieties to an unappetizing gray. For this reason you may prefer to dehydrate vegetables indoors.

Most vegetables, incidentally, dehydrate faster than fruits. Two days is an average processing time, although some, like whole green beans, take twice as long.

It's much easier to describe the food drying process than to explain how to tell when an edible is ready to be packaged. Most fruits and vegetables will be leathery but not brittle, while a few will actually become crisp and will shatter when struck with a hard tool. Some — cherries, for instance — will still be sticky even when free of moisture.

You'll soon learn to judge the feel and appearance of whatever you dry. At the outset, though, you may want to consult a reference work for a description of "doneness" in specific foods.

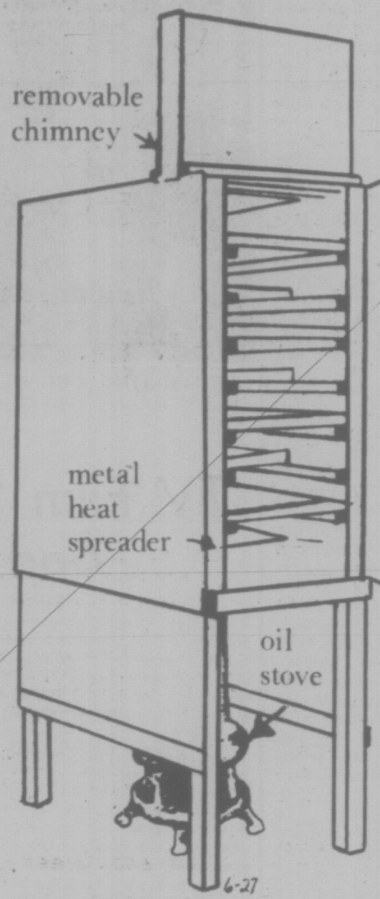
Your dehydrated stores can be packaged in various ways, depending on your local climate. In damp coastal area, for instance, use heavy plastic or glass jars, and make sure that both containers and food are perfectly dry before packing. Also, check for condensation from time to time during any extended storage period.

In low-humidity areas, net or paper bags are satisfactory containers for dried food. When you've bagged your products, fold over the tops of the sacks, fasten them with paper clips and mark each parcel with the name of the item.

Store them in the kitchen cupboard — but DON'T leave them there indefinitely without attention. Take the bags down occasionally and check the contents to see that they're still dry. Some of the food may require a brief reprocessing. This can be done by leaving the food in the sacks and turning them to expose all the edibles to the warm air.

Remember, the only danger that threatens your stock is contact with moisture (which will cause molding and possibly provide a breeding place for bacteria). As long as the fruits, vegetables or whatever are kept dry, there will be no problems and the edibles will last until next season's produce is available.

Dehydrated food can be used in a number of ways. You can restore moisture to fruits by soaking them in water or by placing them in a colander over the open top of a steaming teakettle or pan. The reconstituted peaches or whatever can then be used just as if they were fresh or canned.



Home food dryers such as this help when the sun fails to cooperate

Alternatively, the fruits can be left dry, chopped or added to cakes, breads, stuffings or salads. They're also fine to eat in place of candy and are great snacks to tuck into packed lunches or to nibble on while travelling.

Dried vegetables can be soaked or steamed in the same way and served in casseroles or with butter and seasonings. They also go well in stews or soups.

Whether you try sun drying or dehydrating your edibles with artificial heat, this age-old method of food preservation deserves your consideration. Drying doesn't require the support of heavy industry as do canning and freezing, and it's too valuable a skill to be forgotten.

ROSE FAVORITE

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A poll underway in flower shops across the U.S. shows the rose to be the favorite choice as national flower.

But the Florists' Telegraph Delivery, which is conducting the survey, said the leading write-in candidate is marijuana.

Americans spend $3.34 billion on cut and potted flowers every year — about $50 per family per year — not counting, of course, cannabis blossoms.

The organization said it is conducting the poll to help Congress decide which flower should officially represent the nation.

The rose so far has 39 per cent, followed by the daisy with 13 per cent, the carnation with 10 per cent and the dogwood and apple blossom with 7 per cent and 5 per cent respectively.

Heading up the write-in tally were the petitie flowers of the cannabis sativa, otherwise known as marijuana, with 12 votes. There was one write in for skunk cabbage.

The poll also had some non-floral write-ins; nine for Jimmy Carter and three for President Ford.

Fishermen Seek 50-Mile U.K. Zone

LONDON (AP) — British fisheries organizations here united in calling for a 50-mile exclusive fishing zone around Britain's coastline.

The call was made as the European Economic Community's Foreign Affairs Council was to meet in Brussels to review its fisheries policy.

The British Trawlers' Federation, the Scottish Trawlers' Federation and the Fisheries Organization Society complained that the British government is too weak in renegotiating the EEC policy.

"All British fishermen, from the owners of small inshore boats to the operators of deep-sea trawlers, are deeply worried over the apparent willingness of the government, before serious negotiations even begin, to concede a 12-mile limit on some of our richest fishing grounds," the joint statement said.

"It is our united belief that such concessions would pose a serious threat both to employment and the nation's future supplies of a valuable food resource."

HOW TO KEEP LEATHER CLEAN AND FLEXIBLE

By NORMAN H. STARK
LEATHER CLEANER

Making leather is an ancient art that the Egyptians practiced thousands of years ago, using oak bark in the tanning process. In Europe guilds of leather-makers were formed, which are believed to be the forerunners of labor unions.

Leather is a porous material that breathes. This fact sets it apart from synthetics that generally do not. But if the pores of leather are permitted to become clogged with foreign materials such as dirt, the ability to breathe and be flexible is imparied. This formula will do a good job of keeping your leather objects clean and flexible.

All you will need is: ¾ cup isopropyl alcohol (from your drugstore), ½ cup white distilled vinegar and 1½ cups water. Mix these three ingredients together and stir. Store in glass or plastic container. To use, dampen cloth or sponge with mixture and rub into leather until clean. Note: Isopropyl alcohol is flammable. Do not use near open flame.

(Lime any chemical product you use at home, you should store this one safely, label 8t — listing ingredients and noting any cautions — and keep it out of reach of children.)

(There has never been a how-to book so practical and helpful as The Formula Book. Hundreds of easy recipes put savings and fun into the making of your own personal and home care items. Over 200 pages of recipes, diagrams and instructions on ingredients and equipment, in a large paperback format, for only $5.95. Send to The Formula Book, c-o The Times, P.O. Box 2218, Shawnee Mission, Kansas 66201.)

The Formula

Commercial leather cleaning preparations cost from $1 to $5 from the store, but the ingredients cost just a few cents from the drugstore, if the formula for making the cleaner is known.

The Times starts a new column today, The Formula, which gives details of how to make such personal care and household products as deodorants, window cleaners, suntan lotion, oven cleaners and lubricating sticks.

Cause of Kidney Stones

By LESTER COLEMAN, M.D.

your health

I came down with a kidney stone out of the blue. I had been in perfect health until this happened to me. I am 42. The pain was excrutiating until I passed the stone. Now I live in dread that it will happen again.—Mr. H.N., Wash.

Dear Mr. N.:

Anyone who has ever had a kidney stone anywhere in the urinary tract will sympathize with you. The pain is indeed "excrutiating."

A kidney stone is composed of one or more chemicals. Calcium, magnesium, phosphates and uric acid may be deposited anywhere in the kidney, the ureter or the bladder.

The ureter is a very fine tube which carries urine from the kidney to the bladder. When this is obstructed by a stone, it becomes distended and painful.

There are a number of possible causes of kidney stones. One of the prime causes is faulty metabolism (breakdown of foods). In people who have gout, the uric acid content of the blood becomes high and uric acid kidney stones may be formed.

A tiny hormone-producing gland lies deep within the thyroid gland. This little parathyroid gland controls the calcium balance in the body.

Infection in the kidneys and the bladder are also common causes of stone formation.

The single experience that you have had underscores the importance of tracking down its cause.

★ ★ ★

How can I track down the cause of a peculiar mouth odor that came on during the past few months?—Miss T.A., La.

Dear Miss A.:

Halitosis, or bad breath, can usually be traced to the gums, the teeth, the sinuses and the nasal passages.

If no gross evidence of infection or disease is present in these areas, then the stomach and upper intestinal tract must be considered.

Some types of drugs can also be responsible for an unpleasant odor in the mouth. Some types of herbs, in addition to onions and garlic, should be suspected.

Some chronic diseases or chronic infections of the lungs, such as emphysema and bronchitis, can also be the cause.

It was once brought to my attention that drinking eight glasses of water daily resulted in the disappearance of bad breath in those people who had no other cause for halitosis. This should be tried unless your doctor feels that, for some reason, this large amount of fluid is not good for you.

Travelling Without a 'Package'

By LYNNE GORDON

caveat emptor

In the last few years, travel packages, charters and special excursion rates have opened up the mass travel market. This makes it posible for people of moderate means to take trips they never thought possible.

But along with these packages came the "hard sell," the pre-packaged "dream vacation," the assurance that all problems could be taken care of by your friendly airline, knowledgeable tour operator or dedicated travel agent — transportation, room reservations, meals, side trips and sightseeing arrangements.

As the market grew bigger, some of the dreams fell apart. Consumers were pushed into carefully "orchestrated" trips that didn't suit their needs, were promised luxury rooms that didn't materialize and shuttled to substitute accommodations far below par; some side trips were hectic, visits too short, with too many destinations and promised extras that didn't materialize.

And, because it was a package deal, many consumers felt locked into the plans, and out of touch with the country they were visiting. They were not prepared for the emergencies that were bound to happen, nor advised how to handle them.

Consumers believed the brochures, the ads, the verbal sales pitches that promised them "trouble-free" vacations.

Disillusionment then brought anger from both sides. On one hand the consumers demanded that their expectations be fulfilled; on the other hand the travel industry said there were things beyond their control and the consumer expected too much.

My own personal vacation experience this spring gave me an insight into some of the problems other consumers face, some of the problems I think can be avoided with honest dialogue, and an awareness of the problems that consumers should be prepared to handle.

For the first time, I decided to forego the supposed luxury of having all my travel plans made for me. I wanbed to make my first trip to Europe, alone, with a minimum of plans, with only one confirmed hotel reservation at the start of my trip, with a flexible schedule and on a tight budget. The only thing I committed myself to was my destination and time of return. This is necessary to take advantage of the lowest price airline ticket.

My original plans were to start in Paris, travel down to Nice and end up in Athens and sail some of the Greek islands. It was only later that I decided to add Dubrovnik and Rome.

From the beginning I threw out all my pre-conceived notions about travelling.

My four weeks in Europe taught me many things I would like to share with you, to help you face your own travels more realistically and to prove there are alternatives in travelling. I had to live within my budget, to be ready to sleep in different types of accommodation than I was used to such as pensions, boarding with families and stopping in Grade B hotels.

It means also travelling by public bus, going second class on tourist boats to the Greek islands. It meant being more aware of the countries I was visiting: their national holidays: when shops, banks and museums might be closed; when unexpected festivals happened; checking the papers for air strikes, labor disputes and elections.

For the first time, I learned to ask the price of food, drinks and transportation. I bargained with cab drivers who wanted to tack on unexpected surcharges because of the late hour, the distance or the latest unauthorized raise. I learned when to use a metered cab and to be wary of cabs that turned out to be private cars charging what the traffic would bear.

When a hotel in Rhodes didn't please me, I picked up and left, feeling sorry for vacationers who felt locked in for their two weeks.

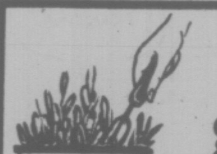
I wandered through museums at my own pace, climbed thousands of steps to gaze at ancient ruins, cried at the haunting view of the Acropolis with Athens at its feet, picknicked on the steps of the Montmarte, played cards with a Greek family on a boat on the way to Crete, sipped coffee for hours in a piazza in Rome and always, always talked to the local people.

I found that my English, some high school French, a small understanding of German, an intense desire to pick up some local phrases, sign language and a smile paved the way for me in every country. Language was no barrier.

I learned how to handle my own baggage, exchange money at the airport, use the National Tourist Board or "tourist police" when I had no hotel reservations. I never held my palm open with a handful of money, finding the exchange easy to understand and more dignity in being aware of the charge and the change.

These are some of the experiences I would like to share with you in future colums.

indoor gardens



By LYNN and JOEL RAPP

Dear Lynn and Joel:

Is it okay to use potting soil that's been used before? I planted some of my plants outside and the soil left in the pots, seems so nice. By the way, I enjoy reading your column very much. I've found out there's so much to learn about plants.—B.A.

Dear B.A.: Thank you for the compliment — and let us be the first to assure you that reading our mail has taught us there's even more to learn about plants than we thought. Many times we get questions that are real stumpers and we have to go off to our research library to come up with the right answer.

Your question about soil is fairly easy to answer: Provided there are no little "critters" in the soil, then it's perfectly all right to reuse it. How to tell if it's free of disease? If the plants that formerly lived in the pot were healthy when you removed them, and a visual inspection of the soil reveals no crawling things or white-fuzzy balls (mealy-bug), then you're home free. Take the soil and either use it for cuttings or another plant. It's not only safe — it's dirt cheap!

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

As a statistic, about 95 per cent of all finesses are taken against high cards — kings, queens, jacks and tens. But, on occasion, finesses are correctly taken against lower cards. These latter finesses fall into the category of "expert play." The reason for this classification is that the expert has developed the habit of observing the rank of all the cards as they fall, and paying close attention to the "spots." The non-expert has not.

As an illustration of finessing against "teeny-weeny" cards, observe today's deal. The South declarer was the late Albert H. Morehead, bridge editor of The New York Times from 193 5to 1963.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	6 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Eight of ♠.

West's eight of spades opening lead was covered by dummy's ten and Easts' queen, Morehead taking the trick with his king. The ace, queen and king of trumps were then cashed, gathering in the adversely held pieces.

The nine of spades was led next, East putting up the jack, with South capturing the trick with his ace. On this trick East followed suit with the spade seven.

It was quite obvious to Morehead that East had the five and three of spades remaining in his hand, for if West had possessed either of these two cards he would not have dropped the seven which, at the point he played it, was the highest-ranking spade left in the deck.

Dummy was then reentered via the club ace, and the deuce spades was led. When East followed suit with the three, Morehead inserted his four-spot, finessing against East's known five of spades. As is evident, the five-spot won the trick.

The high six of spades was led next, and on it dummy's queen of diamonds was discarded. Thus declarer made all 13 tricks, since he was able to ruff out his losing diamond.

Although only an insignificant overtrick was at stake, I can still remember Morehead telling me that he derived more enjoyment out of this deal than he did any other deal he played during his entire bridge career. And he played thousands of hands during his career.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Saturday, July 24

By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Accent on building, home, basic structure, relationship with parent or authority figure. Insist on fact, figures. Get a new deal from a fresh deck. You need not back down — instead, step forward in confident, optimistic manner. Leo, Aquarius figure in picture.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Don't take on losing proposition. Family loyalty is fine —but don't cloud judgment with combination of wishful thinking and pride. Short trip is on agenda. Intuitive flash could develop into viable, profitable concept.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Emphasis on money, costs, possessions. You pay and collect — you evaluate and you sum up travel-vacation expenses, benefits. Another Gemini — and a Sagittarian — could figure prominently. Socialize. Go places and see people. Popularity is on upswing.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Lunar cycle high — take initiative. Study Gemini message. Realize that your personal magnetism now is churning up popularity. Judgment, intuition are likely to be on target. Personality, personal appearance are spotlighted. Scorpio, Taurus persons are in picture.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Backstage whispers are featured — what is purported to be confidential is almost literally shouted. A "count" is made — you're asked to evaluate results. You gain access to letter, call or memo which causes you to "change your mind."

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Accent on friendship, on desire, on profits that could be accrued from business venture. Family member reflects your thought, attitude. You have real all — closer than might be imagined. You'll receive gift in form of luxury item.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Emphasis on area of Solar horoscope dealing with authority, superior, ambition, career, promotion, responsibility. Do away with sloppy methods. Strive to steamline techniques. Steer clear of self-deception. Pisces, Virgo figure prominently.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Accent on how to bring desires to friction. Key is to organize. Strive to understand one who seems intend on making demands. Your position is strong — your ability to communicate is enhanced. Publish, publicize and advertise.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22)-Dec. 21): Dig deep; reject the superficial. If persistent, you could strike pay dirt. Aries, Libra figure prominently. Concern with hidden matters, lost objects, perhaps the occult becomes evident. Refuse to carry burden not rightly your own.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Emphasis on communicating needs, desires to partner or mate. Be especially aware of legal rights, permissions. Aquarius, Leo persons could figure prominently. You soon will be able to maintain a more independent stance. Know it and be confident.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Be aware of details, basic materials — review "homework." You might be called on to design or outline organizational plans. Your intuition comes into play; follow through on hunch. You learn by teaching. Cancer and another Aquarian could be in picture.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Highlight versatility, ability to find ways of getting through, putting ideas across. Your enthusiasm will shine — persons who were somewhat aloof will respond, communicate, invite, praise, seek counsel. You prove a major point!

IF JULY 24th IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you have compelling voice, understanding of art, music, ability to bring together those who hold opposing views. You are completing a major cycle and August should be your most significant month of 1976. Taurus, Libra, Scorpio persons play important roles in your life.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

"Old Sam was quite a character," said Joe. "We read his Will today, and he left his collection of coins to be divided up amongst all his employees."

Mary smiled. "That's nice. He had no family," she commented. "Some could be valuable."

"Sure, but he referred only to numbers. He had only nickels, quarters and dimes, and in each category the coins had to be shared equally amongst all," Joe replied. "There are 2,911 quarters, 4,223 nickels and 4,182 dimes. Amazingly we'll be able to carry out his wishes exactly."

How many employees?

Thanks for idea to G. A. Stier, Thornhill, Ontario.

The Removal of Dead Flowers

The removal of dead flowers from perennial plants has other purposes than that of keeping the garden attractively fresh. The cynic may say we do it for exercise, to fill in time, but the most practical result is that our plants remain healthy and productive of better blooms the following year and in successive years.

In many instances we can say truthfully that we are preventing the formation of seed, a function which demands a terrific amount of plant energy.

Lupins, columbines and delphiniums are common examples of herbaceous perennials in a hurry to set and mature seed as soon as possible after the flowers open. Frequently it is necessary to cut off the stems before all the flowers have faded, because the first flowers out are usually forming seed several days before the last top buds open.

The popular geum, and a number of daisy-type flowers such as coreopsis, erigeron, and the summer blooming helenium can be kept flowering all summer if faded flowers are cut off.

A little bit of observation will show where the cut should be made for the best results. Some plants put out new bud growth on the same flowering stem; others, of which delphinium is one, must put up an entirely new growth from the root. The first kind has its faded blossoms cut off just above the next visible bud; the second has the whole stem cut to the basal rosette of leaves.

When these perennials are grown from seed at home, it is a good plan to remove the complete flower stem after the first flowers fade. This encourages the young plants to make more offsets from the roots and results in larger and more permanent clumps in future years.

The once well-known Esther Read variety of Shasta daisy does not set seed, yet we find the practice of removing the old fading flowers regularly as they reach the browning stage is beneficial to the plants. Not only does this encourage blooming to continue late into September, but the plants are induced to make new growth from the roots to carry on production next year.

Many gardeners ask whether plants such as peonies, lupins and delphiniums should be "cut down" as soon as their flowering season is over.

As a general rule, only the flower heads are removed, not any of the leaves which are still green and in good condition.

Every green leaf is needed by plants in the process of manufacturing food for the roots. This is a reason for not stripping too many from any one plant when some are wanted for flower arrangements.

Since the ground is still dry below the surface in most gardens, give the plants a good soaking after removal of old flower stems. A dressing of screened soil from the compost heap around each plant on top of the soaked soil will enable roots to continue taking nutrients in the moisture provided for the rest of the season.

On windy days we find plants drooping without any other cause than that the air movement is removing mositre from the leaves and none is available in the dry soil for roots to use in replacement.

As new growths are being made on perennials after removal of faded flowers, they will be more dependent on an ample supply of moisture for their continued well-being than will older growth.

These attentions by the gardener now are really no more than practical insurance against loss of treasured flowering plants which should last for many productive years.

Genetic Tests on Toads May Solve Cancer Riddle

LONDON — Scientists at the British Medical Research Coulcil's Laboratory of Molecular Biology at Cambridge have produced a genetially identical group — a clone — of albino toads. Now they hope to use their biological engineering skills in the fight against disease.

Each toad came from the genetic information in the nucleus of skin cells from the same albino embryo, but was grown in eggs from a fully pigmented female from which the nuclei had been removed. The technique, called cloning, can be applied in plants and amphibia, but not yet in mammals. It has important implications both for genetic studies and for the design of experiments aimed at unraveling the mysteries of embryo development.

Cloning experiments confirm that even highly specialized animal cells — such as skin cells — contain all the information needed to manufacture a complete individual even though in normal circumstances skin cells divide to produce only skin cells, kidney cells produce only kidney cells, and so on.

The specialization of cells for specific functions during development in the embryo stage is called differentiation, and is now seen to involve not the loss of genetic information, but its suppression. A central problem facing biologists is that of unraveling the mechanism of suppression; this has immediate relevance to the major unconquered areas of disease.

Virus infections, for example, involve the introduction by the virus into an animal or plant cell or genetic information which takes over the normal processes of the cell and turns it entirely to the production of more virus particles. Eventually the cell bursts from overpopulation by virus particles, and each released particle goes off to find a cell to take over.

If scientists understood how the virus was able to recruit the mechanisms of the cell they would find it easier to design specific blacking agents to prevent the virus genetic information "switching on." Similarly, cancer involves abnormality of genetic functions in the cell, in the sense that specific genetic information which should be switched off — so that the cell ceases to reproduce — remains switched on.

The mechanism by which genetic switches work are still entirely a matter of hypothesis, but at the molecular level all biological processes of this kind depend on highly specialized proteins, each tailored to a specific function. Since even simple organisms may require many thousands of genes — that is, complete units of specific genetic information — there may need to be an enormous range of specialized proteins for their control.

The scientists at the Cambridge laboratory believe that by using a modified cell manipulation technique they may find a route to the identification of specific switches. The possibility has arisen because it was discovered that if alien genetic information is introduced into what is called an oocyte — an egg which has not quite fully developed and still is not capable of being fertilized — then the cell will awaken from its resting phase and produce specific proteins in response to the alien genetic information.

'Destructive' Player Agents Lack Integrity

WASHINGTON (CP) — Agents who negotiate salaries for hockey players were described Thursday as one of the most destructive forces in the game.

Harrison Vickers, owner of the championship Houston Aeros of the World hockey Association, made the statement before the select committee on professional sports of the House of Representatives.

Vickers brought low whistles from the congressmen when, in answer to a question, he said "the average salary on our team is $77,000 a year."

Later, under further questioning, he said:

"Player agents are one of the most destructive forces in hockey today. They have no feeling for integrity and team loyalty. Their demands are just beyond all boards."

He said only one or two agents—he did not name them—did not fall into this category.

Howard Baldwin, WHA vice-president and owner of New England Whalers, said he thought it was important to have better communications with the rival National Hockey League but he did nat want to see a merger as such.

"We do not have a world series with the NHL," he said. "I don't think that's not fair to the fans."

The committee has scheduled nine days of hearings over the next four weeks, seeking views of players, owners and league officials in various sports.

A second series is set for Septemer when federal officials and educators will be called.

Squander Charge Denied by Union

Victoria Mayor Mike Young estimated Thursday the city and its unions "squander" $1,000 each day for arbitration hearings into employee grievances — but his figures didn't match union calculations.

"They should find cheaper, less affluent representatives for arbitration boards," commented Jim Walker, representing Canadian Union of Public Employees outside workers.

Walker said union costs come nowhere near Young's estimate of $450 each for the city's representative on an arbitration board, and "a similar amount for legal counsel."

He said the union's representative on arbitration boards would usually cost closer to $70 a day. "We pay expenses and wages for our nominee on the board who is usually someone from labor."

Young proposed that the city and unions agree to opt for a less expensive procedure than a three-man arbitration board.

His suggestion was that both sides agree to a single arbiter — similar to the procedure used in the majority of local union contracts — and that in most cases both sides could waive the need for legal counsel in the grievances.

But Walker didn't agree. He said the union has won 18 out of 19 of the past employee grievances and so there's no need to change a successful procedure.

Young's suggestion, he said, shows the city is "skirting the issue instead of looking at the cause for the grievances, they're looking at the cost."

He added that if the procedure is cheaper there will undoubtedly be more grievances launched by employees.

Walker said six grievances covering 14 employees have been launched in the last year, on issues ranging from holiday pay to employee suspensions.

Hanging Date Set

VANCOUVER (CP) — The House of Commons has abolished capital punishment but the British Columbia Supreme Court has set a new date for the execution of Elery Steven Long.

In setting Dec. 14 as the new date for Long's execution Mr. Justice Craig Mun said the abolition bill will have no effect on persons already sentenced to hang unless the federal justice minister makes an order for commutation.

Long, 31, had been due to hang Aug. 10 for the 1974 murder of Staff Sgt. Ronald Mackay of Delta police.

Hamilton For Pan-Am?

HAMILTON (CP) — Hamilton will be the host city for the 1983 Pan American Games if Canada is awarded the games, says the vice-chairman of the city's Pan American Games committee.

Ron Weston said he attended a meeting of the Canadian Olympic Association in Montreal this week at which the association approved the city's application to host the games. Hamilton was the only Canadian city to apply.

Weston said it is Venezuela's turn to hold the games in 1983 and it will almost certainly get the games if it makes a reasonable bid. But he said there were political difficulties in that country.

A conference of Pan American Games members will be held in March to decide on the host country.

60 REPORTERS SAID TO BE IMPRISONED

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (Reuter) — Amnesty International says more than 60 journalists were in jail or had disappeared in a total of 20 countries up to July 15. The London-based organization, which seeks to aid political prisoners, said Indonesia detained 21 journalists, India seven, the Soviet Union six, Yugoslavia four and Brazil six.

Terrorist Caught

BERLIN (AP) — Police have recaptured convicted terrorist Monika Berberich, seizing her on a West Berlin street before she could fire a pistol. She was one of four convicted or suspected women terrorists who escaped from a Berlin prison July 7.

Economy Promising For B.C.

OTTAWA (CP) — The strongest economic recovery will occur in British Columbia this year and the Atlantic provinces will show the weakest performance, says a forecast released today on the 10 provinces' economic prospects.

The forecasts were prepared by the Conference Board in Canada, a private economic research group that includes, business, government and labor members. It is the first province-by-province survey the board has done and follows two years of work to develop reliable information that matches published national economic totals.

British Columbia is experiencing a strong cyclical recovery in its goods-producing industries and that should produce real output growth this year of almost six per cent. This will moderate in 1977 to about five-per-cent real growth, slightly more than the expected national average, the board says.

While output will increase, jobless rates are expected to increase sharply to 9.5 per cent on average this year from 8.6 per cent in 1975 and to rise to almost 10 per cent in 1977.

Ontario's economic recovery is likely to be slower than in other areas, while in Quebec, despite the Olympic Games, economic performance will be sluggish well into 1977.

In the West, the strong Alberta economy is expected to falter because of declining oil production and reduced agricultural output.

The board's forecasts are summarized provincially by major regions.

In the Atlantic region, Nova Scotia's prospects are optimistic. All major economic sectors, except manufacturing, show greater strength this year than in 1975. Unemployment will fall in the second half this year, but overall will average about 9.2 per cent of the work force in 1976, up from 7.8 per cent last year. Retail sales are expected to rise by 14 per cent.

New Brunswick's economy will be weak, likely showing real growth of about four per

New Logo For B.C.

British Columbia will soon have a new logo gracing all government stationery and literature.

And it won't be the stylized version featuring mountain and sea commissioned by the NDP, but a symbol incorporating the traditional dogwood emblem, the provincial coat of arms and the name of the province.

The logo is being drawn up by Dave Brown, the special adviser in the premier's office who was hired at a salary of $150-a day to complete a report on government communication services.

Brown said today the logo he is working on is not new. "The last thing we need to do is to get into something new that will upset the people who like the traditional dogwood.

"I'm playing around with the use of the name B.C., the coat of arms and the dogwood," he said.

OLYMPIC IMPOSTER FURORE

MARTIN

Times News Services

MONTREAL — Robert Martin of Paris, Ont., a member of Canada's track team, was expelled from the Olympics today for allowing a non-accredited athlete friend to occupy quarters in the athletes' village, Maurice Allan, chef de mission for the Canadian team, announced.

Martin had been scheduled to take part in the men's 100-metre heats to celebrate his 26th birthday today and also was a member of the 4x100-metre relay team.

The incident began Thursday when it was reported that an imposter named Paul Wilkinson, an athlete from Oregon — had

The incident began Thursday when it was reported that an imposter—named Paul Wilkinson, an athlete from Oregon—had been living with members of the Canadian track team for almost two weeks without being accredited to the Games.

A subsequent investigation by members of the Canadian delegation and by security forces in the village led to a Thursday night statement that the whole affair was a hoax perpetrated by an athlete from another country.

The members of the delegation and security forces said they had arrived at this conclusion after interrogating the Canadian athletes at a team meeting, with special emphasis placed on the 12 members of the two relay teams.

"Up to 6 p.m. yesterday the information we had following our inquiries gave us reason to believe the story of an imposter was wrong," Sgt. J. L. Gagnon of the Montreal police said.

But he said new information later became available when the athletes again were questioned.

"We now confirm that the person involved (Wilkinson) was in the Olympic village without accreditation," he said. "We held a special meeting with Robert Martin and must now confirm what

FORD INCREASES PHONE BUGGING

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the House of Representatives investigations subcommittee said today the Ford administration has asked American Telephone and Telegraph Co. (ATT) to install many more wiretaps than the Nixon administation did.

"We've seen a marked, dramatic increase under Ford," said Representative John Moss, Dem. Calif. "Who is he atpping? Why the escalation?"

Moss made the statments as ATT officials refused to give the subcommittee their records of the government's national security wiretap requests. They acted in accordance with an order by a U.S. District Court judge.

The judge's temporary restraining order Thursday representated a victory for President Ford, who had asked the justice department to take court action "to prevent the disclosure of this sensitive information."

Moss said a justice department affidavit outlining its wiretap requests to ATT shows 76 in 1972; 95 in 1973; 141 in 1974, with 115 of them after Ford became president in August; 141 again in 1975 and 58 for the first six months of this year.

There was no indication whether the requests came from Ford himself or from others in his administration.

Construction Mediator

Labor Minister Allan Williams has appointed a mediator in the construction strike-lockout and will select a second one Monday to deal with the B.C. Hydro contract dispute.

Former associate deputy labor minister Jim Kinnaird was named Thursday to bring in a non-binding report on the construction industry negotiations within 14 days.

The appointment was announced by Williams after meeting the both sides.

The labor minister said no back-to-work legislation is contemplated.

"There is not going to be any legislation with this dispute."

Williams said both sides had agreed to accept the appointment of Kinnaird, a former president of the B.C. and Yukon Building Trades Council.

When he was in the labor department last October, Kinnaird in a report to the previous government had warned that hassles would continue in construction negotiations unless unions formed a joint bargaining council.

Both sides agreed in principle with the report but the unions were unable to come up with a formula for implementing the idea and this month, a last-minute effort to form a single bargaining agency was defeated 8-7 by the 15 trade unions involved in negotiations.

The lockout of 40,000 workers began three weeks ago after strikes by the cement masons and carpenters.

Lum Denies Profits

Saanich Mayor Ed Lum today denied huge profits would be made through rezoning of land in the Vanalman and Glanford area for a proposed industrial park.

On Thursday Lawrence Cook, chairman of a concerned citizen's group charged developers and land speculators would make profits of up to $42 million if the land now part of the agriculture freeze was rezoned for industrial use.

Cook based his calculations on the presumption the property has been selling for between $2 to $3.50 a square foot as agriculture land and yet would go for between $9.50 to $11 a square foot if zoned industrial.

But Lum said Cook "should get his facts straight."

The industrial site would only permit light, clean industries, such as warehousing, he said, and "if anyone paid more than $4.50 a square foot for the property he'd be out of his mind."

Lum said the profit margin would be relatively small as developers would be required to pay $50,000 to $60,000 an acre for water and sewage services, as well as absorb costs of buffer zones.

He also replied to charges of council being vague about the ultimate size of the site by saying the proposal had been set out in the regional plan "with all the boundaries drawn."

Lum said the industrial park would be a maximum of 120 acres with 20 to 25 acres set aside as buffer zones.

Stiff Taxes, Cutbacks Face Britons

Times News Services

LONDON — Britain's Labor government Thursday junked 30 years of Keynesian policy and announced a stiff, $3.4 billion defaltionary package at a time of high and rising unemployment.

Denis Healey, chancellor of the exchequer, told Parliament he will slash next year $1.8 billion from a wide list of Labor's favorite programs. They range from job subsidies through school lunches to public housing. This, however, had been expected.

But Healey also will slap a $1.6 billion tax on business that can be passed on to consumers through higher prices. That was a shock.

Healey told reporters, "This has been the most difficult, dangerous and exhausting task I have yet had to face as chancellor." He and Prime Minister James Callaghan spent seven grueling meetings to get the package through the cabinet.

MAGNETIC TRIGGERS PROTECT POLICEMEN

FOSTER CITY, Calif. (AP) — A magnetic device to prevent crooks from shooting policemen with their own guns is being installed in all revolvers used by the Foster City police department.

"We are the first police agency in the world to equip our men with this device," Police Chief John Norton said Thursday.

The mechanism works by means of a metal inset in the grip of the pistol. It has a moving part that blocks trigger operation unless the shooter wears a special magnetic ring on his finger. When the ring comes within an inch of the trigger-block, the gun can fire.

The invention is the work of Joseph Smith of Sunyvale, who calls it the "Magna-Trigger Safety." Smith said he expects the device will save lives unrelated to police work.

"A child living in a house where a gun is kept could not shoot himself or a playmate," he said.

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

A fast-moving Oak Bay resident and Saanich firemen joined forces early today in a dramatic rescue of a youth trapped in the tangled wreckage of a demolished luxury car.

The resident — Phil Ballam, of 498 Beach Drive — snuffed out a fire that threatened to engulf the car and its 17-year-old driver, Michael Donegani.

Donegani, 17, of 995 Terrace, was the driver of a Mercedes Benz that went out of control about 3 a.m. on Beach Avenue, caroomed off a rock wall and wrapped itself around a tree.

"I heard a terrific noise and ran outside," Ballam said. "Two young lads were standing near the wreckage yelling: 'It's going to blow.'"

Ballam said the car had slammed into the pole with such force that its undercarriage was sticking up in the air.

"It was a mess," he said.

Ballam said he spotted a small fire and heard someone inside the car gasping. He ran into his house for the extinguisher and called Oak Bay police.

He said the fire was easy to put out, but when the gasping stopped inside the car, he thought the young man had died.

"I was just amazed when the boy came-to when the rescue equipment arrived," Ballam said.

He said the jaws-of-life was like a big pair of tinsnips:

"Crunch, crunch, crunch, and away came the roof. There was no other way to get him out," he said.

Oak Bay RCMP are still investigating the accident.

Meanwhile the three municipal fire departments on the Saanich peninsula will also be armed with a jaws of life machine thanks to the Sidney Rotary Club.

The service club has donated the hydraulic rescue tool priced at about $7,800 to the town of Sidney, to be held in trust for use by North Saanich, Central Saanich and Sidney fire squads.

SCIENTISTS TREAT VIKING'S ARM LOCK

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Viking officials believe they have diagnosed, and can easily solve, a malfunction on the Mars lander that caused its soil-scooping arm to jam.

If their theory of the failure is correct, project manager Jim Martin said Thursday night, the beginning of the search for life on Mars next Wednesday will not be affected.

Martin said the telescoping arm, designed to reach out for a handful of Martian soil and dump it in a small biology laboratory, jammed Thursday after being extended for a test.

It jammed while being retracted, he said, apparently because a locking pin that should have fallen free did not do so.

He said that was the most probable cause of the trouble. The cure, which will be tried Sunday, is to command the robot lander to extend the arm again until the pin falls to the ground.

Hospital Back Pay Row Brewing

Union and management representatives are meeting today to settle an outstanding issue holding back payment of wage increases for 16,000 Hospital Employees Union workers.

The meeting was scheduled following charges by Jack Gerow, HEU general secretary, that the Health Labor Relations Association is stalling on payment of the wage settlement they were ordered to pay when the provincial government ordered striking workers back to work.

Gerow said the hospitals have not paid either the eight per cent general increase retroactive to Jan. 1 or the 3.4 per cent cost-of-living adjustment due June 1.

In a letter to hospital industry troubleshooter Neil Munroe, Gerow said he wants the matter solved within five days or the union may be forced to take job action to disrupt health care delivery in B.C.

"Unless our members get what is their's by law and by all justice, it seems inevitable that the peace imposed by the Hospital Services Collective Agreement Act will be shattered," said Gerow.

HLRA spokesman Bill Rolfe said today hospital management is "trying to implement the agreement as quickly as possible" but there is still a payroll dispute as to how the hourly rate will be calculated.

The union, he said, is arguing for a new wage calculation that would be "inappropriate and unworkable and would cause the need to change all computer payroll methods."

He said there is "no way" HLRA will be able to implement pay increases within Gerow's specified five days.

Rolfe said HLRA would welcome "quick arbitration" to settle the matter, but under Bill 75 only Gerow has the following options: He can take the matter to the Labor Relations Board, apply for arbitration on the issue, which the employer cannot do, or take the matter to Munroe.

Munroe is scheduled to be in on today's management-union meeting.

The contract is currently before the Anti-Inflation Board, and the provincial legislation ordering the collective agreement did not specify that new wages had to be paid June 1, said Rolfe.

TOWN TALK

After two centuries Hawaiians have made amends for the barbarous ways of their Sandwich Island ancestors — with five cases of juicy fresh pineapples despatched air-freight to Victoria.

The penalty was first discussed during a recent brief visit to Hawaii by Mayor Mike Young. At a reception Young fell in conversation with the chairman of the state's agriculture department, John Sarias, and learned that his host was heavily involved in planning bicentennial festivities to mark the islands' discovery by Captain James Cook in 1778.

Young mentioned that Victoria was having its own event, a Cook memorial unveiling, and invited Sarias to attend. After all, he said, it was the least he could do considering his forbears had bumped off the famous explorer.

Sarias initially accepted but telephoned Young about four days before the July 12 ceremony to say he couldn't come.

But "in atonement" for past sins, he added, he was sending over some pineapples.

At almost the exact moment Fraser was making his announcemnt, a public works crew set to work repainting the faded parking space lines on — you guessed it—the front driveway of the buildings.

There is no official explanation of the overlap. All queries bring only red-faces.

MRS. BRUNNING
. . . happy 101-year-old

Mrs. Ellen Brunning shunned cigarettes and beer all her life and that's why she's still around to talk about it . . . 101 years later,

Now in Homewood Rest Home, 3907 Blenkinsop, Mrs. Brunning also attributes her lengevity to an ability to keep happy at everything she did — including work.

"And she still is an extremely happy person," says Mrs. Elsie Herbert, nurse and proprietor of the home.

More than 200 Red Deer expatriates recently gathered in Beacon Hill Park to relive the pleasures of the Prairie summers and the exhilaration of its winters.

The consensus was that Red Deer is still a great place to visit, preferably in the summer.

Picnic organizer George Horn reported the flow of Red Deerites to Victoria increases each year and they seem to be coming at a young age. In all there are 180 known families consisting of some 500 people from Red Deer in this area.

It's a fair drive from Victoria's Sportsman Motor Inn to Parksville's Park Sands resort but Neil de Macedo expects to be making the drive quite often now that his company, Demco Management, has purchased the up-Island property.

Park Sands, popular with Victorians, has been in operation since 1909 and consists of cottages, tenting grounds and trailer park. Gordon and Edith Bannerman have owned it for the past five years and they will continue as managers until a new administrator is appointed by Demco on Jan. 1.

"We have no specific plans for Park Sands, we just thought it looked interesting so we purchased it," de Macedo says.

That grey monolith of concrete rising from the steps of the spacious, glass-fronted main entrance to the Law Courts on Burdett Avenue is a new stair well. So what was wrong with the old stairs, apart from the fact people could hardly find them?

Not a thing. But since the original structure went up more than a decade ago the building safety code has tightened up. Since two additional storeys were being added it was thought appropriate and timely to raise the standard of access by means of the new concrete column attached to the exterior.

The new court support facilities were to have been ready for occupancy in October—until the construction shutdown came along. Now nobody's guessing how much longer the higher courts will be stuck in rickety old St. Ann's.

Jim, who had been piqued about the peak, got word this week from federal Energy and Resources Minister Alastair Gillespie that there's no way the mountain's name will be changed back to its original Castle Mountain.

Nesbitt led the battle against a group of Albertans who had been pressuring for the name change.

The very idea, huffed Jim, was "rude, ungrateful, childish, boorish, insulting, spiteful, petty, despicable, ungracious and undignified".

Fares: Once More with Feeling

The Association of Vancouver Island Municipalities — angered and frustrated by government indifference to its demand for a conference on ferry rates — will tray again to make its case for a reduction in fares.

AVIM members met for 90 minutes in Saanich Thursday and announced they will once more seek a meeting with cabinet ministers.

Port Alberni Ald. George McKnight, president of AVIM, said the group asked Transport Minister Jack Davis May 17 for a ferry fares conference and made the same request July 9 to Premier Bill Bennett.

He said the association hasn't received a reply from either Davis or the premier.

'To ignore the request of an association which represents virtually everyone living on the Island is inexcusable, unforgiveable," McKnight said.

Duncal Mayor Ken Paskin, vice-president of AVIM, added: "It is sad we have to go to this point and take this kind of action . . . it comes out of frustration."

Twenty-two representatives from councils and seven regional boards on the Island attended the meeting. Invitations had been extended to Davis and the nine Vancouver Island MLAs including Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis.

But only four of the MLAs—Scott Wallace (PC-Oak Bay), Charles Barber (NDP-Victoria), Sam Bawlf (SC-Victoria) and Barbara Wallhat) — turned up.

McKnight said Davis told the association he would be in Ottawa while Curtis replied he couldn't attend without stating any reason.

The association unanimously endorsed a six-point statement which calls for a rollback in freight rates and the setting of preferential rates for Island residents, and urges the government to pursue federal subsidies on the grounds the ferries form a part of the Trans-Canada Highway system.

It notes some increase in ferry rates was warranted — McKnight suggested 20 per cent — "but not the exorbitant rates presently in effect" and implores the government to recognize the negative effect the new rate structure has had on the tourist industry.

Tory leader Scott Walklace said the association is "whistling in the dark" if it hopes the provincial government would be able to get federal subsidies. He castigated Saanich Mayor Ed Lum for suggestion the high cost of food and lodging on the Island was responsible in part for the decline in number of tourists this year.

"It's too simplistic to point a finger at the industry," Wallace said. "The answer lies not in blanket condemnations but in on-going dialogue between government and residents."

He said the fact no representative of cabinet was at the meeting leaves him with the impression the decision on ferry fares is inflexible and unbinding.

Bawlf said he came to listen and not to speak. He pointed out, however, there had been an increase in passenger traffic on the Swartz Bay-Tsawwassen run although added it was still down 2 per cent from last year.

Bawlf chided the association members for "making a noise" about the plight of the tourist industry on the Island. He said such talk would be "more destructive than anything because the word gets around Vancouver Island is not a good place to visit."

That raised the ire of association members, one of whom said that when the Socreds campaigned last fall they promised if elected they would be available to discuss problems.

'But," he said, "it's almost impossible to get to see or talk to anyone in the party.

By KIT COLLINS
Times Staff

Victoria firefighters today won wage parity with their counterparts in Vancouver.

Arbitrator John Davie said his decision was made because of the trend towards parity by firefighters the province over.

The contract is retroactive to Jan. 1, 1976.

The ups and down of the Vancouver-Victoria wage rates were included in evidence in the hearing, Davie said. In 1964 Victoria was the highest paid department in B.C., but thereafer it slipped back.

The Duncan lawyer said in 1975 Victoria firefighters placed about 20th out of 35 departments.

Because of evidence showing the dependence of the greater part of B.C. to set their rates by the Vancouver rate, "I am satisfied there will be no wrong done if I do the same thing."

The city's view that because of the excellent benefit plan of Victoria firefighters wages should be less than Vancouver was unfounded, Davie said.

He said firefighters should not be penalized because of the benefit plan because "it would amount to giving with one hand and taking back with the other."

Vancouver firefighters are bargaining for a new contract which is expected to widen the 2.6 per cent disparity with Victoria's force to almost 18 per cent.

Firefighters here have asked for parity or an increase of 17.6 per cent and the city proposed an increas of 7.3 per cent, plus .7 per cent for fringe benefits.

Davie noted that he was only required to set down the terms of the contract and said he believed he had accomplished the job by hooking it to the outcome of Vancouver negotiations for this year.

The Anti-Inflation Board guidelines, will have to be followed in the Vancouver negotiations, and because of the disparity with Victoria it may mean Victoria's actual wage increase will exceed the guidelines.

But the decision will rest with the AIB, Davie said.

The Vancouver contract will apply to the Victoria firefighters in all areas except for payments to first aid attendants.

Top Convention Post Given McCarthy's Former Manager

By LIZ HUGHES
Times Staff

Travel Industry Minister Grace McCarthy has appointed the man who ran her campaign in the December provincial election to a $25,000 job as B.C.'s convention co-ordinator.

The minister announced the appointment of promotion specialist John Plul today.

Mrs. McCarthy said Plul will work out of Vancouver and will attempt to convince convention groups to bring their business to Vancouver and Victoria.

Plul will also encourage groups which come to B.C. for conventions to see more of B.C. "through the agressive promotion of trips before and after the convention itself." McCarthy said.

Plul, 36, has been administrator of the radio station CKNW's Orphans' Fund for the past 10 years and has also acted as the station's promotion manager for the past six years.

He has worked for five years with the promotion and convention committee of the Greater Vancouver Convention and Visitor's Bureau.

Plul was hired to try to boost B.C.'s $45 million annual earnings from conventions.

McCarthy said Plul and other staff members of the travel industry department will also be looking at opportunities to encourage B.C. firms and associations to hold their provincial and regional mettings at locations outside of Vancouver and Victoria.

McCarthy said priority is being given to promoting convention business because it is a year-round industry and because convention delegates spend far more money than individuals or groups travelling independently.

Meanwhile, just over $11,000 has been pledged by businesses up to this morning in the campaign to encourage more visitors to Victoria.

$35,000 To Fight Erosion

The provincial cabinet has authorized the spending of $35,000 to help fight the shoreline erosion at Mount Douglas Park.

Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis said today the money will come from funds allocated by the Capital Improvement District Commission for shoreline erosion control and beautification programs in the Victoria area.

Curtis said he began his quest for government assistance while he was on Saanich council in 1973.

Crash Cuts Power

A 34-year-old man was taken to Victoria General Hospital after the car he was driving sliced into a power pole at Metchosin Road and Laren early this morning.

Dennis Burzuk of 432 Suemar Place was reported in fair condition with a fractured leg.

The accident occurred at 2:42 a.m. and the resulting power failure which lasted two hours and 15 minutes was largely unnoticed by the residents in the area.

One exception, however, was Vic and Virginia Foster of 3963 Metchosin Road.

Mrs. Foster, a clerk at the Colwood RCMP office, said her husband was connected to a kidney machine having his blood dialysed when the lights went out.

Mrs. Fosetr said she had to find candles to get enough light so that she and her husband could see the machine and drained the blod off.

Car Rentals at Ferries

The B.C. Ferries terminal at Swartz Bay and Tsawwassen will soon have rent-a-car stands, assistant ferry traffic manager Bill Bouchard said today.

Tenders on the franchise were let several months ago and the successful bidder will be picked within a month.

Bouchard said a similar system was tried on a trial basis a few years ago, but it didn't work.

"It just didn't pan out then," Bouchard said. "People thought nothing about paying $5 to take their car across."

Bouchard said a rent-a-car system would be practical for a businessman who would be able to walk on the ferry as a foot-passenger on one side, assured of getting the ferry he wants, and pickup a car on the other side. The franchise will be given to the same company for both terminals.

Why Should Rec Facilities Have to Pay Their Way?

Operating civic recreational facilities should be regarded as a service to Victoria residents and not as an assortment, of "frill" activities to be financed by user groups and individuals.

In endorsing that philosophy on Thursday, members of the city parks and recreation committee appeared to be presenting a united front of opposition to the arguments advanced by committee chairman Ald. Ron McKenzie.

On several occasions during protracted budget discussions earlier this year, McKenzie urged council to review its whole policy on sports and recreation, particularly with a view to standardizing subsidies and bringing rates charged more in line with actual costs.

Used as the basis for Thursday's deliberations was a mass of data from recreation manager Jack Morgan, including the costs of operating the city's four main facilities (Memorial Arena, Crystal Pool, McPherson Playhouse and Royal Athletic Park), a breakdown of attendance, fees charged and city subsidy for each user group, and financial comparisons with 10 other B.C. municipalities.

But before any of the details could be discussed Ald. Bill Tindall challenged the rationale of revising rates.

He said there are already clear signs that some of the city's facilities are becoming deserted mausoleums — programs and rates at the Crystal Pool, for example, are not attractive enough in relation to the new Oak Bay Recreation Centre — and rather than raising admission rates council should consider reducing them.

The costs of running the pool are unchanged whether it's occupied at the time by 20 or 200 youngsters, he noted.

Tindall said operating costs must always be borne in mind but they must also be related to the use in question. The self-supporting school of thought could be extended to ridiculous limits, including installation of meters on tennis courts and fencing off Beacon Hill Park for paid admission only.

"I am under the impression we are driving minor sports out of the city" to neighboring municipalities where they receive better financial treatment, he added.

But Mayor Mike Young retorted that he doesn't want to get involved in a "price war" with Oak Bay or anyone else. "That would be nonsense. We are not trying to compete in this but supply a service."

Said Ald. Bob Ellis: "I think we have to realize that we are running a city and not a shop. It mystifies me why we always have to try to justify our expenditures on everything — arguing about who gets what in the way of subsidies."

To prepare charts showing that a minor hockey player receives a $2 subsidy from the city while a participant in some other sport receives only $1.75 is absurd, Ellis claimed.

Young told aldermen he would not be prepared to consider reducing charges for any civic facilities unless and until there is solid proof available that patronage has suffered because present rates are too high.

Although McKenzie pointed out there was "considerable pressure" from the public for reductions, the mayor said the only undertaking he would give was that rates for amateur bodies would be maintained at their current levels.

Meanwhile, however, the committee recommended a series of increases in rentals charged to professional users.

Zeller Takeover Almost in Bag

By JEFF CARRUTHERS
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The federal cabinet Thursday failed to make a decision on the proposal by U.S.-controlled Macleod Stedman Ltd. of Winnipeg to take-over control of Zeller's Ltd. of Montreal, thereby virtually assuring the success of a competitive bid by Fields Stores Ltd. of Vancouver.

Justice Minister Ronald Basford, MP for Vancouver Centre, confirmed at the break-up of the regular weekly cabinet meeting that no decision had been taken, or could be taken, in time to meet Macleod Stedman's self-imposed Thursday afternoon deadline for obtaining Canadian government approval of its take-over bid under the Foreign Investment Review Act.

Basford said he thinks that Fields take-over, which should now finally be approved by a U.S. appeals court and the bankruptcy trustee for bankrupt W. T. Grant Co. of New York which holds a controlling interest in Zeller's, will be good for Fields, Zeller's and Canada.

Basford said both Fields and Zeller's are aggressive companies and should be good for each other. He also thought it was good that the national retail outlet was staying in Canadian hands.

The remarks assume that Macleod Stedman, a subsidiary of Gambles Canada Ltd. of Winnipeg which in turn is owned by Camble-Skogma Inc. of Minneapolis, will in fact drop out of the take-over battle for Zeller's, as it promised, or that failing that, the U.S. appeals court will confirm a previous bankruptcy court decision to accept the $32.7-million offer from Fields for the Zeller's shares owned by bankrupt W. T. Grant Co., despite the higher $35-million offer from Macleod Stedman.

The Macleod Stedman takeover proposal was originally rejected by the trustee of bankrupt W. T. Grant Co. of New York because it required Foreign Investment Review Agency approval.

FIRA had informed Macleod Stedman that based on the original take-over application, Industry, Trade and Commerce Minister Donald Jamieson would have to recommend the take-over be disallowed.

Reportedly one reason for the initial decision to recommend disallowance was a Gambles Canada refusal to consider increasing Canadian ownership in its operations in Canada.

Subsequent representations by Macleod Stedman to FIRA reportedly did not change Industry Minister Jamieson's mind about disallowing the proposed take-over.

But Mr. Basford indicated that no formal recommendation from FIRA was before the federal cabinet on Thursday, thereby making a formal decision impossible, despite the fact that the matter was on the busy cabinet agenda for that day.

In light of the Thursday deadline for FIRA approval set by Macleod Stedman, the lack of decision was just as effective as a disallowance, at least in the mind of Mr. Basford, who admitted he prefers the Fields take-over.

The lack of a decision was expected at least a week before and was further assured by Industry Minister Jamieson's absence from Ottawa and from the cabinet meeting Thrusday.

Normally, the Industry Minister attends the cabinet meeting at which an important take-over decision is to be made.

A spokesman in the Prime Minister's Office said that there is only one more major cabinet meeting schedule this month next Thursday, before the government takes its traditional August holidays.

The Foreign Investment Review Agency refused any comment on the lack of a decision by Cabinet Thrusday.

Series Honors Directors

George Cukor, who earned his reputation as "an actor's director" is honored on the Men Who Made the Movies, Saturday, July 24 at 8:00 p.m. on Public TV 9.

"Adaptations of theatre pieces has always been a specialty with Cukor," says film critic Richard Schickel, who produced, wrote and directed the series. "At every stage of his career from The Royal Family of Broadway (1930) to The Philadelphia Story (1940) to Born Yesterday (1950) to My Fair Lady (1964) — he has brought his special blend of elegance, wit and taste to bear on light comedy, often making memorable, indeed beloved, films from what could have been forgettable material."

Cukor's latest effort is The Blue Bird, filmed in the Soviet Union with Elizabeth Taylor, Ava Gardner, Jane Fonda and Cicely Tyson.

Cukor attributes his success to work with the actors — and not from visual effects. Selected scenes of some of these memorable performances will be seen on The Men Who Made the Movies: W. C. Fields in David Copperfield; Greta Garbo in Camille; Spencer Tracy and Katherine Hepburn in Adam's Rib; Hepburn and Cary Grant in The Philadelphia Story; Ronald Coleman in A Double Life; and Judy Garland in the remake of A Star is Born.

On the program, Cukor also reminisces about the movie greats with whom he worked in Hollywood's Golden Age.

Peyton Place 'Great Life'

By BOB THOMAS

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It was just 10 years ago, Canadian actress Barbara Parkins recalled, that the night-time television serial Peyton Place started to engross the United States with its steamy tales of small-town life.

In addition to giving new life to the ailing ABC network, the series helped launch a number of careers, including those of Mia Farrow, Ryan O'Neal, Cris Connolly, Patricia Morrow—and Barbara Parkins.

"That was a wonderful period of my life, those five years in Peyton Place," Miss Parkins says. "Anyone in a series is anxious to get out and I was glad when the five years were over and I could start looking for new vistas. But Peyton Place left me with nothing but good memories."

The 31-year-old Vancouver-born actress sought her new vistas abroad. After finishing her role in Valley of the Dolls, she left to visit London and decided to stay there.

Hollywood could never quite figure Barbara Parkins. She was ambitious and unpredictable. She talked back to studio executives and posed nude for a Playboy spread before it was fashionable for actresses to do so. Her love life kept the columnists writing such names as Ryan O'Neal, Adam Batman West, Bobby Rydell, Robert Evans, Eddie Fisher, John Philip Law and Omar Sharif.

Some observers thought it suicidal when she abandoned Hollywood for a London flat. Back here for a visit earlier this year, she explained why she left:

"I wasn't mature enough to do the kind of role I wanted to do. I wasn't strong enough—or slender enough; I was too pudgy. Now I've lost weight and I've matured. I'm a woman and I can handle anything in the acting line that comes along."

She has made strides toward proving that in Europe. She did two rather forgettable films to fulfil her contract with Twentieth Century-Fox—the Kremlin Letter and The Mephisto Waltz.

Recently she was seen on public television as Leonie, Winston Churchill's aunt in the British-made series, Jennie, Lady Randolph Churchill. She displayed a depth of feeling that was light years removed from Peyton Place.

Now she has her biggest break to date, playing opposite Lee Marvin and Roger Moore in the African spectacle, Shout at the Devil, which American International Pictures recently acquired for release in the U.S. and Canada. Producer Michael Klinger is reported to have poured $9.5 million into the film, which concerns the struggle to destroy a German battleship in Africa during the Second World War.

W5 Inquiry Looks at Violence In World of Canadian Hockey

A W5 Inquiry will take a look at the world of hockey in Canada on Sunday, July 25, at 10 p.m. on Channel 8.

"Despite reforms in the amateur leagues and active attempts to eliminate the violence and confusion in pro hockey, hockey clubs and players are coming under heavy criticism for the direction in which the game has evolved," according to W5 Inquiry associate producer Jeff Fry.

"This inquiry shows that pro hockey has consciously become a spectacle of violence oriented entertainment," Fry says.

"Players and coaches, it seems, are no longer being signed on the strength of their skills, but instead are being lured and enticed by leagues and clubs with the promise of big money in return for a crowd-pleasing display. Hockey in Canada and the United States seems to be prospering for the same reason westerns and crime movies prosper — violence — and agents, owners, coaches and players are all too aware of the big money involved if their arenas are filled with crowds looking for fight action."

Although the show discloses that amateur hockey in Canada, under the auspices of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, is honestly and diligently attempting to cope with problem areas through the improvement of quality in the game — its training, safety standards and equipment — the way in which violence is escalating in the pro leagues is undermining their attempts. Coaches in both pro and amateur leagues say clean hockey is for "sissies." The program suggests that the heroes of pro hockey may have become the butchers.

As well as looking into violence, Inquiry examines the amateur hockey machine, a system that is largely geared to feeding the pro leagues with its best players. In many cases registered amateurs are virtually chattels and very few have any say in where they will get to play.

"The figures indicate that while the total number of young hockey players in the country is shrinking, the number being grabbed for the system that feeds the pro leagues is on the increase and there is real fear in the hockey community that more and more of the sport is coming under the influence of big hockey business."

Congressional crimefighters in the U.S. are worried, not only about the source of some club purchase money, but they are also working with Canadian police in an investigation into the upsurge in gambling on the outcome of hockey games.

PHYLLIS DILLER is the lady in Did You Hear the One About the Travelling Saleslady?, a comedy set in the early 1900s. Sunday on Channel 11 at 3 p.m.

Women's Fight for Vote on 9

Shoulder to Shoulder, a six-part series about the bitter struggle to obtain voting rights for British women, returns to Masterpiece Theatre, Sunday, July 25 at 9 p.m. (rebroadcast Friday at 9 p.m.)

The story of how women forced their way to political recognition in the 20th century, Shoulder to Shoulder focuses on the remarkable Pankhurst family — four women who mobilized a woman's army of liberation. Sian Phillips stars as Emmeline Pankhurst, mother of the fiery and brilliant politician Christabel (Patricia Quinn) and of the artistic pacifist Sylvia (Angela Down). Louise Plank is the youngest (Adela).

Interwoven into their story are the actual historical and political events of the day. Shoulder to Shoulder also dramatizes parallels to many vital social issues of today — such as the debate between violence and non-violence, prison reform, women's rights, class struggles, and "conspiracy trials."

The series, which was created by Englishwomen Midge McKenzie, Verity Lanbert and Georgia Brown, also shows that, unlike modern popularizations of the suffragettes, they actually were women who suffered much for their cause. Dangerous forced feedings, and bad prison conditions regularly were suffered by these dedicated women.

Shoulder to Shoulder was made under the auspices of the BBC Television Drama Group, in association with Warner Brothers Television. Masterpiece Theatre is a presentation of WGBH/Boston.

Pops to Feature Ethel Merman

Ethel Merman gets a standing ovation when she joins Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra on Evening at Pops '76 Sunday, July 25 at 8 p.m. on Public TV 9.

And when she begins a unique Merman Medley—46 years' worth of her Broadway musical hits—the audience goes wild. Among her selections are "I Got Rhythm" from the 1930 Gershwin musical "Girl Crazy," "Doin' What Comes Naturally," from "Annie Get Your Gun," and "Hostess with the Mostes' on the Ball" from "Call Me Madam." Also included are a string of Cole Porter hits "(Let's Be Buddies" from "Panama Hattie," "Anything Goes," "It's D'lovely" from "Red, Hot and Blue") and several songs from "Gypsy."

Maestro Fiedler and the Pops play a medley of Irving Berlin songs, Tchaikovsky's "March Miniature," and wrap up the evening with the Bobby Darin hit, "Mack the Knife" (from "The Threepenny Opera").

Saturday Night Nets Ackroyd

Dan Ackroyd, formerly of the cast of CBC-TV's Coming Up Rosie (the sitcom series for kids that returns for a second season Sept. 13, Mondays at 4:30 p.m.) is now a member of the regular cast of Saturday Night, the NBC Emmy-winning late-night show. He's the second performer the Coming Up Rosie series has lost to the NBC show. Gilda Radner, another Saturday Night regular, was an original in the pilot for Coming Up Rosie.

Lee Book Honored

Dennis Lee's book Alligator Pie, which was adapted into a critically-acclaimed half-hour special by CBC children's TV last season, has been included in the 1976 Hans Christian Andersen Honour List. It is the only international children's book award in existence. "I'm delighted. Children's books are starting to come of age in Canada. It doesn't just honor Alligator Pie — there are many good books coming out of Canada now," said the poet in reference to the award made in Vienna earlier this year.

Isfahan Visited

One of the greatest cultural leaders in Iranian history was Shah Abbas, and his most impressive creative achievement was his capital city, Isfahan. Sunday, July 25 at 7:30 p.m., Public TV 9 presents a half-hour special, The Isfahan of Shah 'Abbas, capturing the ambience of that great city.

'Abbas, who reigned from 1587 to 1629, encouraged the arts in most of Iran's major cities, but it was to Isfahan that he brought his greatest studios of weavers, painters, calligraphers, builders, ceramicists, and metalworkers. Isfahan is Iran's St. Petersburg and Iran's Versailles, and like both European cities, it is almost entirely the creation of one patron.

Much of this splendid early 17th century city remains today, an outstanding example of creative urban planning and architecture.

Emmy Battle, More Involved

The latest battle over television's Emmy awards involves not who should receive the coveted statuettes. but who has the right to give them.

The Hollywood chapter of the National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences lost the first round Friday in its court fight to dissolve the national academy and regain control of the awards.

Superior Court Judge Norman Dowds refused to enjoin a schedueld meeting of the national academy and denied a motion by the Hollywood chapter to place the academy under receivership.

The local chapter, citing "numerous and irreconcilable differences" in a long-standing dispute, filed suit last May 18.

In asking for the dissolution of the national organization and for possession of the awards, the local chapter said it originated the Emmy presentations before the national academy was formed.

About 43 per cent of the academy's 11,000 members belong to the Hollywood chapter, the suit claims.

Composers 'Least Appreciated'

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The least appreciated creative men in show business are the two dozen or so composers who write background scores for dramatic television shows.

This perishable music is composed by truly talented men, among them David Rose who has won two Emmy awards, one for his memorable theme for Bonanza which was heard on the show for 18 years.

Each week he bends to the task of supplying from 20 to 35 minutes of original music to accompany the action on screen. The music almost always is understated, creating subtle moods to hype each scene.

It is not the substance from which popular hits are made. Nor do record companies besiege him to put together an album from the melodies he creates.

Rose, whose Holiday for Strings is a pop calssic, doesn't expect viewers to remember his scores, much less rave over them. Anonymity goes with the territory.

"Over the years I've written virtually thousands of scores for television," he said, somewhat vexed. "Almost all of them were destined to be heard but a single time.

"It's something composers live with. I own taped copies of each score along with music sheets. Not one of them repeats a theme.

"It wouldn't pay to cheat. I could search through all my cue sheets and steal here and there from myself. But I could write a dozen new ones in the time it would take to find them.

"So I just sit down and compose. Melodies and harmonics come easily for me. Sometimes I write in ink with very few corrections.

"I'm sure there are some hits in the thousands of things I've written. If I were going to do a broadway show I could find enough material in my files to provide the score without writing another note.

"Thank God I don't have to write lyrics for television. I've never written a lyric in my life."

Rose is not under exclusive contract to Little House on the Prairie." If a producer wants an infusion of fresh music, Rose is available.

He looks at a show only once, puts together a cue sheet and then spends a day or two composing the music.

"I average about three shows a week," he said. "Seventy five per cent of the music is cops and robbers stuff or love themes. I know it sounds complicated, writing that much music, but it's a matter of practice and discipline.

"After composing the music I go to the studio and conduct the orchestra. Hollywood studio musicians are among the world's finest. Sometimes we run right through the score perfectly the first time."

Writing television scores is an enormously profitable means of making a living. But Rose misses the excitement of live concerts.

This spring he will head for Japan to conduct 21 concerts. He's also planning concert appearances in this country.

"I don't like what's happening in music today," he said. "People with hit records have forgotten about melody. Some young composers are doing a good job but they're not being heard.

"Popular music hasn't progressed in the United States. It's standino still or, worse, going backward."

Rose acknowledges there is excellent music being written for television, but, lamentably, nobody appears to be listening.

MARK OF JAZZ AIRS PRYSOCK

Arthur Prysock shows that he's the 1970's Billy Eckstein and Joe Williams rolled into one when he joins Philadelphia jazz connoisseur Sid Mark on Mark of Jazz, Friday, July 30 at 10:30 p.m. on Public TV 9. Backed by his brother Red Prysock and trio, he performs Young Lovers, The More I See You, I Worry About You, In the Rain and Don't Misunderstand.

In the last thirty years since his early start with the Buddy Johnson Band, Prysock has been one of the kings of the blues. In addition to his extraordinary success in the recording studio, his nightclub and concert performances have reinforced his solid reputation as a singer whose roots have always been deep in rhythm and blues. From the posh Ciro's in Hollywood to the more earthy Apollo Theatre in Harlem, his personal appearances repeatedly draw sell-out crowds.

Act of the Heart

Canadian Film Featured

With a winning screenplay based on an idea by producer Paul Almond, Act of the Heart took five Etrogs at the 1970 Canadian Film Awards, including Best Actress for Genevieve Bujold, who stars with Donald Sutherland. (On Channel 8, Thursday, at 9 p.m.)

Under the brilliant direction of Paul Almond, Bujold and Sutherland, who both bring a rare depth and reality to the screen, along with co-star Monique Layrac, have created what is acknowledged by audiences and critics alike as a classic love story. It intelligently and sensitively explores the drama, love and commitment of a young Augustinian priest who give up his life's work when he falls in love with a country girl determined to become a successful chanteuse.

Filmed on location in and around Montreal, director-producer-writer Paul Almond, who received an Etrog for Best Direction, features Bujold — adding a new dimension to her career — as a songstress. She performs Harry Freedman's original music and sings two songs composed for her by songwriter, Gilles Vigneault.

Co-star Sutherland, cited for his performances in Klute and M.A.S.H., is at his best as the sensitive young priest who finds a new world opened to him.

As well as best actress for Bujold and best direction for Almond, Act of the Heart won Etrogs for best art direction under Anne Pritchard, best original music score for Harry Freedman and best re-recording for Roger Lamoreaux.

Fifth Season For M-A-S-H

M-A-S-H, which returns for its fifth season this fall on the CBS Television Network, continues to achieve recognition of its entertainment quality with the awarding of The Humanitas Prize, presented annually for humanizing achievement in television.

An episode titled The Interview, written by Larry Gelbart, was named winner of the award in the half-hour category for "its wry and caustic indictment of war and the absurdities and devastation it inflicts on people."

CBS Extends NBA Deal

Exclusive broadcast rights to National Basketball Association games on the CBS Television Network for two more years, starting with the 1976-77 season, were announced jointly today by Barry Frank, Vice President, CBS Sports, and Lawrence F. O'Brien, Commissioner of the NBA. Under the agreement, the Network will broadcast a minimum of 37 games each year, including the NBA AllStar Game.

Tony Bennett

Popular Vocalist Hosts Concerts

"I just try to make people dream. If I can make people forget and get carried away — that's what I like to try to do."

That is Tony Bennett's philosophy. The Italian grocer's son with the incongruously raspy speaking voice and butter-soft tenor takes centre stage in a special series of all-musical half-hour program, taped at The Talk Of The Town in London, England, and featuring the accompaniment of Robert Farnon and his Orchestra. This Is Music premieres Thursday, July 29, 7 p.m. on Channel 8.

Each week, the vocal stylings of Bennett are complemented by the on-stage presence of internationally-renowned singers from the entertainment world. Tony's special guests include Sarah Vaughan, Billy Eckstine, Matt Munro, Cleo Laine and Tommy Leonetti. Each highly-individual artist brings a different feel to the programs.

In addition, Bennett and his guests are featured in filmed visits to some of London's most memorable haunts and favorite spots, such as Buckingham Palce, London Zoo, Trafalgar Square and Kensington Gardens, all to the accompaniment of Robert Farnon and his Orchestra.

The fine melodies of some of the greatest popular songwriters in history come to life in the easy-listening expertise of Tony Bennett, a performer who has never compromised his musical integrity. Among the classic songs rendered by Bennett are Just In Time, Who Can I Turn To, Broadway, It Had To Be You, The Shadow Of Your Smile and the unforgettable San Francisco, immortalized by the master of musical understatement.

TV 'Makes' a Poet

By ROBERT MUSEL

LONDON (UPI) — Pam Ayres did not write: "I must go down to the seas again, to the lonely seas and the sky. And all I ask is a tall ship and a star to steer her by . . ."

That was written by the late Poet Laureate John Masefield, who held the British sales record of 60,000 for a volume of poetry.

That is until Miss Ayres wrote: "Medicinal discovery. It moves in mighty leaps, It leapt right past the common cold and gave it us for keeps. Now I'm not a fussy woman, There's no malice in me eye, But I wish that they could cure the common cold. That's all. Goodbye" — and sold 400,000.

Her publisher and manager, Phil Solomon says he can't believe the sales figure — at $2 a copy.

But then he couldn't believe his eyes when he saw a pleasant 29-year-old become a TV star simply by sitting in a chair and reciting homely verses at the camera in a country accent.

Solomon thinks Miss Ayres talents are not as local as he considered they might be at first since orders keep coming in from all over the commonwealth.

So he went to Los Angeles last month to see if America will be interested in the girl who wrote: "I am a bunny rabbit, Sitting in me hutch, I like to sit up this end, I don't care for that end much, I'm glad tomorrow's Thursday, 'Cause with a bit of luck, As far as I remember, That's the day they pass the buck."

"It was my wife," said Solomon, who is producer of one of the West End's hit shows, "Ipi-Tombi," a South African native revue.

"She said there's a girl who recites poems on TV that you ought to sign up. I said you must be joking.

"But I looked in on the program of new acts, Opportunity Knocks, and this nice, plain country girl won out over all the singers, dancers, magicians, ventriloquists. I said to myself, don't fight city hall. This girl has got something.

"Now she is not only a hit on TV, not only the writer of a best-selling book, not only recording her first poetry LP, but I've signed her to headline a variety concert at Norwich.

"I mean in the middle of the rock and roll and all the other entertainment there will be our Miss Ayres reciting her little poems. Amazing."

When Solomon says something is amazing he knows whereof he speaks. He has been known, when a hotel has denied he has booked accommodation, to strip off his clothes in the lobby and announce he is sleeping on the nice soft rug in front of the reception desk. He has twice found this quickly produces a room.

She was always imaginative but it turned into rhyme in Singapore where she was serving with the Women's Royal Air Force Corps. When she returned to England she found one of her poems quoted on a local radio station and it all ballooned from there.

"I like to write about things I know," she said with the bright smile that is her chief asset next to her doggerel. "I mean everyday things. People seem to like me to recite about the everyday affairs of life. They identify with them and I suppose that's why they're popular."

Hence Miss Ayres' ode to Britain's rampant inflation: "Sling another chair leg on the fire, mother, Pull your orange box up to the blaze, Hold your pool old mittens out and warm them, In these inflationary days, Sink your teeth into that dripping (beef fat) sandwich, Flick the telly on to Channel Nine, And if we get the sound without the picture, Well, I'll kick it in the kidneys, one more time."

Summer Sounds on Radio

If sports aren't your bag, if the Olympics are just Greek to you, don't shut yourself in a cupboard for the summer. While CBC-AM Radio is zeroing in on the Olympics from start to finish, CBC-FM Radio is providing some delightful alternative listening for Canadians who don't know jogging from judo.

Several Monday-to-Friday series are offering music from jazz to classics and stimulating ideas to open mental windows and let in some fresh summer air.

Bob Kerr's noon-time Of the Record show will concentrate on new releases, and some quite old disks, varying from organ to ballett music and other light classics.

On Afternoon Concert host Kim Coward offers three hours of fine classical artists.

During the dinner hour Margaret Pacsu's Listen to the Music series dishes up a savory assortment of recordings, from Bach to ragtime to Moog, with news of music events across the country, and colorful anecdotes about the musical greats.

And Sunday through Friday That Midnight Jazz ends the day with the best of jazz recordings old and new from five CBC centres.

Each week-night Ideas offers informative talks and discussions on a wide variety of fascinating topics, such as genetics, consciousness, madness or music, with a fun quiz and performances of Beethoven sonatas as changes of pace.

To brighten your weekend there's a morning series, Ad Lib introduced July 4. It offers recorded music and conversations with guests who know a lot about special aspects of music, even though some may not make their living in the music field anyone from Dizzy Gillespie to Harry Somers, an architect to a politician, or Cleo Lane to Maureen Forrester Hosts are Canadian composers Norma Beecroft and Norman Symonds, who have a knack for taking the stuffiness out of the serious topics, giving light ones new dimensions, and making guests sparkle.

Books

Pat Barclay

I admire Jack Hodgins' writing in Spit Delaney's Island, but I can't honestly say, after reading all 10 of the stories in the book, that I enjoyed them. With one exception, there's too much general frustration and atmosphere of impending doom in them for that. Yet Hodgins writes with a sure and penetrating touch; he compels us to believe in his distraught people, and it's probably a measure of his talent and skill that they manage to affect us as much as they do.

Spit Delaney's island is Vancouver Island, where Jack Hodgins was born and where he lives and works today, as an English teacher in Nanaimo. Some of the stories in this collection have already appeared elsewhere, and one of them, "After the Season," won the President's Medal from the University of Western Ontario for the best Canadian short story of 1973, but Spit Delaney's Island is his first book. I'd recommend reading it in one or two sittings at first. Hodgins' stories have a way of sticking in one's mind and you may find, if you read them one at a time instead, that you've learned rather more about the distress of isolation than you wanted to.

Nearly all of Hodgins' major characters have to cope with some form of isolation, although there can be a lesser figure in the background demonstrating that it can be done. The book is framed, for example, by two stories about Spit Delaney, whose world falls apart in Separating and shows signs of mending again in Spit Delaney's Island.

* * *

Spit is a steam locomotive engineer in a paper mill. Or was, until the company sold his beloved machine to the National Museum. He tries to escape his despair by taking the family on an overseas vacation and ends up hiding behind a pyramid and playing a tape-recording of his locomotive to the Egyptian desert. When they return home his wife leaves him. "There wasn't a thing (Spit) could reach out and touch and be sure of," writes Hodgins.

But in Spit Delaney's Island, Spit meets a scruffy, life-loving poet named Phemie Porter. Phemie believes that Spit can "survive and go on," and because her personality touches his imagination, he begins to believe it too.

In Other People's Troubles, a 10-year-old boy learns to face disaster alone when his mother, who is the neighborhood mainstay in times of trouble, collapses after his father's accident. When an outsider interrupts Hallie Crane's isolation in After the Season, however, both of them are worse off than before. And in Three Women of the Country, Hodgins isolates a character named Edna Starbuck by making the one friend who might have helped her unable, like doubting Thomas, to see the truth of anything not readily apparent.

So isolation affects various people in various ways, Jack Hodgins shows us, and whether one learns to cope or goes under seems to depend on something he has a character called Mr. Swingler say: "Talent's all right, but you got to have guts as well."

* * *

Without "guts," Crystal Styan in By the River loses her grip on reality rather than face it head-on; without "guts," Brian Halligan in The Religion of the Country sells out to bad taste and materialism in the same way as his mother becomes a nun to escape her loneliness.

In other words, Spit Delaney's Island is full of useful examples should Margaret Atwood happen to be thinking of bringing Survival, her study of victims in Canadian literature, up to date. Hodgins even uses Nature as a monster lurking in the background of some of his stories. (In Separating, an Indian story describes a "Sea-Wolf monster (that) used to come whanging up out of the Pacific . . . to gobble up people.")

Hodgins' prose is disciplined and economical. His descriptions of B.C.'s dramatic west coast scenery are models of accuracy and restraint. His descriptions of people are often wickedly concise. ("A little stick of a woman, hardly taller than her porch railing, she wore a mop of white hair on top like an abandoned nest.")

Several of the stories in Spit Delaney's Island are close to fantasy, and one, At the Foot of the Hill, Birdie's School, is like a fairy tale converted into a western movie. This aspect of Jack Hodgins' writing, combined with his absorption in the theme of isolation, resembles the work of Eudora Welty. But Hodgins' ability to make extraordinary characters in unlikely situations seem like a genuine slice of Canadian life is uniquely his own.

From Nightmare to Myth

By JULIAN REID

When the true history of the human spirit comes to be written, it will be a saga not of kings and conquests but of the archetypal myths that shape Man's collective awareness and guide each individual in patterning his life. And looming large in the chronicle will be the nightmare visited upon a 19-year-old girl one momentous evening in 1816 — the dream which gave rise to Mary Shelley's now-classic novel, Frankenstein

For that tale, along with the host of successors it has spawned, is the closest we have yet come to a definitive myth of modern man in relation to his technology. "Mary Shelley's 'waking dream,' " as Martin Tropp asserts, "was more than the inspiration for a novel; it was the visionary moment that brought together many converging forces, the most important point on a path that led from one woman's past to the future of mankind."

Last year, Radu Florescu's In Search of Frankenstein recreated in fascinating detail the background of that moment and the events leading up to it. But Florescu's book had little to say on the dream's profounder significances. Tropp's new study, Mary Shelley's Monster, complements it nicely, concentrating on the essence of the myth rather than its incidental circumstances. Like its predecessor, it makes for excellent reading — besides standing as a worthwhile contribution to our insight into the collective mythos that shapes our world.

If Mary Shelley's nightmare has become the nightmare of our age, it is because she herself was trapped in her own personal version of our common crisis. Her dream grew out of a lonely, loveless childhood, dominated by an uncaring father and a spiteful stepmother. Caught in a web of obsessive intellectualization, alienated from her deepest feelings and masking herself behind a coldly manipulative facade, Mary was congenitally incapable of coming to terms with the depths of her being.

Her inner conflicts were externalized in the shapes of Victor Frankenstein and his shambling alter ego — a manifestation of that repressed, endlessly frustrated subself his consciousness cannot acknowledge as his own. "As a symbol of a demonic technology," Tropp points out, "the Monster never loses the pathetic quality of an abandoned child that strikes out at a world it can never join."

Underlying Mary's dream were the restive, resentful stirrings of the abandoned child within herself. What enabled her to raise personal neurosis to the level of collective mythmaking was her inspired fusion of it with the scientific and technological revolutions burgeoning around her. Animating Frankenstein's Monster, that "first and most enduring symbol of modern technology," was her prophetic insight that "technology can never be any more than a magnified image of the self." Into our machines we project our repressed motives. Like Victor Frankenstein, we act out forbidden fantasies through our hapless creations.

Mary Shelley's own tragedy was that she never succeeded in resolving her psychic conflicts by accepting her nightmare nemesis as a vital, if suppressed, aspect of her self. Thus, though she succeeded in delineating the archetypal myth of modern technology, she failed to provide it with a satisfactory resolution. There is no reconciliation between her Frankenstein and his creation; it begs for compassion, but he remains incapable of responding. Deadlocked, man and Monster can only destroy each other.

Tropp seeks an escape from this impasse in subsequent developments of the myth, particularly the various movie versions. It was the 1931 film, he points out, that "really reanimated the Frankenstein myth for the twentieth century;" and Boris Karloff's sympathetic portrayal of the Monster as a shambling child-thing cursed with a deadly innocence, "an orphan raised to do evil by wicked, uncaring adults," looms as its currently definitive incarnation.

But not until 1974 was the reconciliation of Monster and maker finally achieved. In Mel Brooks' affectionate travesty, Young Frankenstein, Victor Frankenstein's grandson, Frederick, after assembling an updated, zip-fastened version of his ancestor's infamous creation, is struck by a belated insight: "Love is the only thing that can save this poor creature!" Complications ensue, hilariously so; but in the end compassion triumphs. Frederick and his Monster exchange favors, each thereby gaining his heart's secret desire; one superfluous lobe of over-developed brain-tissue in return for one "enormous schvannschtuker." What more could Man, or Monster, ask?

Tropp spells out the hopeful moral: "Young Frankenstein portrays an end to the conflict between science, technology and society. Frederick learns that our technology reflects ourselves and our motives; if we replace repression, fear, arrogance and the desire for control with acceptance, love, humility and the capacity for understanding, our machines can become a well-adjusted part of our culture."

And only then will Mary Shelley's Monster cease to haunt our lives.

Planting of the Soul

By ANATOLE BROYARD

Andrew Marvell's Green Thought in a Green Shade would not do for us today when we think in "tanks." Besides, nature makes many of us nervous, unless we have a swimming pool or a tennis court to lend it a less profound purpose than simply being there. The Bible says we began life in a garden, and some of us hope to end it in another one, the Elysian Fields of heaven. In the interval, we have our pachysandra, our tree-lined streets, our window boxes, our flower pots, our plastic heresies.

If you have The Genius of the Place, by John Dixon Hunt and Peter Willis, at least you own the idea of the thing, and what an idea it is, to write a social and cultural history of man by approaching him through his garden. The subtitle of their book is The English Landscape Garden, 1620-1820, but, as one of their authorities says of a well-designed landscape, "the emotion often spreads far beyond the occasion."

The Genius of the Place is an illustrated anthology of theories of landscape gardening, descriptions of famous gardens and poems celebrating them. For Alexander Pope, who had a splendid one, his garden conduced to "the Feast of Reason, and the Flow of Soul." In his poem The Seasons, James Thomson celebrates a garden as the place where ". . . all the Tumult of a guilty World/Tost by ungenerous Passions, Sinks away"

But, according to the authors, many a bone of contention lay buried in the garden. Not everyone was content to put his soul out to pasture. Some wanted their gardens to embody philosophies, politics, poems—even puns, epigrams and satires. The early Tudor garden was little better than a flowered fortification of high walls and massed formations of color. They were as stiff and unnatural as the first gothic nudes. People were still too close to nature to appreciate the natural.

The garden next became an arena where English liberty struggled against French absolutism. When the Western world was overwhelmed by Le Notre's "miracle" at Versailles, the garden began to be regarded as an expression of its owner's personality. Ambitious landscapes—a pretty oxymoron—were designed to be "read" like poems: here one meditated; there one dallied with the tenderer sex; farther on, a suitable melancholy, an intimation of mortality, was encouraged. Water was made to rain, roar, purl or mirror. A strategically placed ruin "excited an inquiry into the former state of the edifice," bringing to mind "the fleeting Forms of Things, and the Decay even of this our Globe." The sublime, compounded of "awe and terror," might be soothed by the picturesque, a tossed salad of "intricacy and variety." Like Jean Cocteau, who said, "The nightingale sings badly," men tried to improve on nature, to "collect and epitomize" its attractions.

The serpentine became a positive obsession at one time, according to Hunt and Willis, and a stream flowing in a straight line was abhorrent to the eyes. Like adolescents rejecting their uncultivated parents, some of the gentry would have nothing to do with rude nature, with its "warts and boils," even its uncovered "pudenda," as one writer put it.

In The Genius of the Place, there are "heroick" gardens that suggest "the great and extraordinary" in nature and pastoral ones "abandoned to caprice." In Thomas Whately's view, the idea "should seem to be suggested by the scene . . . not sought for, not labored; and have the force of a metaphor, free from the detail of an allegory." If allowed to go unchecked, the Continental passion for horticultural allusion might reduce the garden to a recondite conundrum and leave no scope for the "personal reverie" that seems to have formed a part of the country gentleman's exercise.

A Son Goes Digging Into Papa's Past

By JACK SCOTT

It's a curious fact about the publishing business that a mediocre book retailed in the slack Spring or Summer period stands more chance of critical attention and sales than it might enjoy when the competition is greater.

This accounts in some measure for the surprising success of Dr. Gregory Hemingway's memoir of his enigmatic, much-explored father, Ernest. It is a slight, rawly-emotional, badly written, episodic 100-odd pages, yet some of Hemingway's greatest admirers have hailed it as a moving soliloquy of love, and sons being what they are, a little bit of hate.

One reason, perhaps, apart from the fact that there's not much else around worthy of attention, is that the hunt goes on, even at this late date; that clues to the writer's character and motivation are still eagerly sought. It seems clear that the painstaking, researched and somehow bloodless biographies of Carlos Baker and A. E. Hotchner left many unanswered questions and, indeed, that the market for Papa-lore may be inexhaustible.

'Everything Has Echo'

This slim volume has a further attraction, as Norman Mailer observes in a brief, pungent preface: "For once, you can read a book about Hemingway and not have to decide whether you like him or not." Mailer, in fact, may have described this memoir best in his summary: "... every bad thing we have ever heard about Hemingway can find its echo in this book . . . yet everything fine, noble, attractive and splendid in the man comes in with its echo as well."

Dr. Hemingway, now a New York physician and the youngest of Ernest's three sons, has the virtue, above all, of absolute, unassuming, candor, so that the real impact of "Papa" lies in what are emotional memories of his father. Since Gregory was in the custody of his mother, Pauline Pfeiffer, the second of Ernest's four wives, after her divorce, this is a sporadic account of visits with the writer in Sun Valley, Idaho, or at Bimini or, later, on the farm outside Havana. But always it is the testament of a son who was ready to worship the father. Only in his later years, when Ernest was facing insanity and the prospect of suicide, did he waver.

Awkward, Sincere

"When you knew my father for a long time in his youth you could only love him and marvel at him," he writes in his awkward, sincere way, "and when you knew him when he got older you could only be sad and bitter." In his younger days, Gregory notes elsewhere, "my father was not a bully, a sick bore or a professional celebrity. The man I remember was kind, gentle, elemental in his vastness, tormented beyond endurance, and although we always called him Papa it was out of love, not fear.

Such black-and-white character analyses can only add to the considerable Hemingway mystique and Gregory contributes to it in many other ways. The famous, sometimes conceited "machismo" of the father is deepened when Gregory recounts how Ernest saved his life when he encountered three great sharks while spear-fishing off a blue-water Cuban reef. Ernest instructed the 11-year-old boy to throw something at the sharks to distract them, then to swim his way. Gregory remembers, "He lifted me up on his shoulders and threshed through the water to the dinghy." This surely was something more than facade of grace under pressure, so evident in every Hemingway novel, though the introspective son wonders if it was bravery: I guess almost any man would have waited for a child" — or bravado. (The incident was persuasively fictionalized in the uneven, posthumous novel, Islands in the Sun.)

HEMINGWAY . . . contradictions

Guilts, Prejudices

Gregory, very much like his father, is prone to guilts and prejudices and can write of his drunken episode of elephant slaughter in Africa, his own escape from reality, or of that poignant moment when his father was buried in Idaho after the suicide that stunned the world. He writes remorsefully of his "relief when they lowered my father's body into the ground and I realized that he was really dead, that I couldn't disappoint him, couldn't hurt him any more . . . I hope it's peaceful, finally. But, oh God, I knew there was no peace after death. If only it were different, because nobody ever dreamed of, or longed for, or experienced, less peace than he."

This genuine, heart-on-the-sleeve response is what makes the book alternately moving and embarassing. Mailer makes the canny observation that this simplistic, non-definitive format is precisely what gives "Papa" its charm and honesty.

"He is here," Mailer writes. "By God, he exists. He is a father, good and bad by turns, even sensational and godawful on different days of the year, and his contradictions are now his unity."

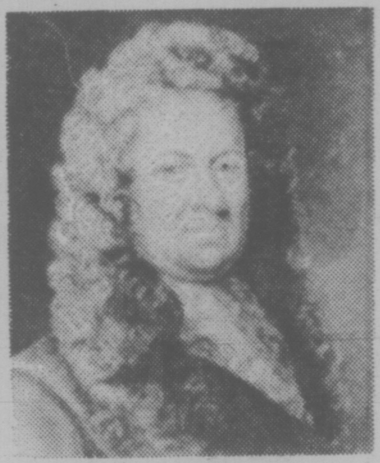
And So, Pepys at End of Line . . .

By GEOFFREY GRIGSON

"And thus ends all that I doubt I shall ever be able to do with my own eyes in the keeping of my journall." The new unexpurgated edition of Pepys, in this Volume IX (a volume of commentary and an index volume are to come), has reached the last entry, Pepys signing off on May 31,1669.

He is still only 36 in spite of the trouble with his eyes, and much of his career is unfulfilled. But now he "undoes his eyes" every time he takes a pen up to fashion that shorthand which tells us about his pleasures licit and illicit, and makes us privy to the domestic life of a successful and honest administrator under Charles II, a man of normal pleasures, whose tailor has made him "a new stuff-suit with a shoulder-belt, according to the new fashion, and the bands of my vest and tunic laced with silk lace, of the colour of my suit" — ("And so, very handsome, to church.").

From now on, Pepys cheerfully complains, his diary will have to be kept by his staff in long-hand; he will have to be contented (though in fact he never again kept a private diary) "to set down no more than is fit for them and all the world to know."



PEPYS . . . freshness fades

He is still at it in this volume, this happy extrovert, happy egotist, whose troubles blow away like petals from a cherry tree. "This day yo did first with my hand tocar la cosa de our Deb in the coach." Slipping his hand where it shouldn't have been inside Deb's clothing, caused him trouble enough when his wife noticed what was going on. Found out, Pepys blows hot and cold, or only lukewarm.

In the language-garbled entries about our Deb appears much of his character. He wants more than to tocar her cosa, he dreams of having her, he intends to have her; under scolding he repents, she is dismissed, he will never see her again; but he does. He is sorry about getting her into trouble with her mistress. He tells Deb to remain respectable — while slipping his hand again to the nearest interesting portion of her flesh and pulling Deb's hand to his flesh. He promises himself to give her money, but gives her only half as much as he first thought of.

As for Mrs. Pepys, she is at him, she nags (she would have passed out if she could have read her husband's shorthand and discovered how much tocar this and tocar that there was with girls other than Deb). She even spies on his dreams, which she thinks must be about Deborah or about Jane the maidservant: "My wife mighty peevish in the morning about my lying unquietly at night, and she will have it that it is a late practice, from my evil thoughts in her dreams; and I do often find that in my dreams she doth lay her hand upon my cockerel to observe what she can" — surely the extreme of wifely jealousy. Every most vivid thing has to be entered. He drinks new milk in May, hears "excellent music, late in the dark, with great pleasure," observes the moonlight reflected in the Thames, eats a jole (jowl) of salmon; he tries to buy a Montaigne; and Mrs. Pepys picks the lice out of his clothing.

Yet the prolonged youthfulness or freshness of Pepys seems to have been ending — at least in these final two years the diary isn't so lyrical in the old way. Fewer pieces of fascinated description or discovery extend from page to page. So we may not have lost so much by the discontinuation of the diary. I am left wondering whether Pepys, as the years went by, ever reread this chronicle of his delights. Was it just out of an immediate excess of "go" that he set down, day after day, so much more than was fit for all the world to know?

Flight into Blandness

"A Severe Strain on Credulity" — thus, in 1920, the New York Times dismissed Professor Robert Goddard's proposal to launch an unmanned rocket to the moon. It is a measure of how far half a century has brought us that when Patrick Moore prophesies a manned moon-base by 1995, he is unlikely to strain the credulity of anybody at all.

Indeed, the most noteworthy feature of Moore's slick preview of The Next Fifty Years in Space is its blandness. Even the striking color-paintings by Andrew Farmer lack the visionary immediacy of the best astronautical art.

What this volume slights is the luminous excitement of endlessly unfurling horizons. The future here sounds stodgy and wholly unremarkable. Far better the tribute Ray Bradbury paid it a quarter century ago: "It is good to renew one's wonder. Space travel has again made children of us all." J.R.

The Essayist Who Helps Us Find Our Common Bond

By PETER MURRAY

HOAGLAND

It is common for critics to label Edward Hoagland as a "naturalist" writer and compare him to Thoreau. Since he is an essayist like Thoreau (a rarer occupation today than it was then), and he frequently writes about nature, particularly its wild creatures, that's not too surprising.

But it also points up the unhappy fact that increasingly we are separating the two, as if man and nature are somehow divisive. The extreme environmentalist, of course, would maintain that they are, and the separation is there even for Hoagland, but he at least moves easily between the two and recognizes the bond.

The gulf between modern city and natural rural living is now too great for most of us to bridge, and so we don't even try anymore. Or as Hoagland observes, "The roads are full and the woods empty."

As compensation we breed more and more dogs, an estimated 40 million in the U.S. alone, in a futile attempt to sustain our links with the animal world. Says Hoagland:

"The first reason people kept a dog was to acquire an ally on the hunt, a friend at night. Then it was to maintain an avenue to animality, as our own nearness began to recede. But as we lose our awareness of all animals, dogs are becoming a bridge to nowhere. We can only pity their fate."

The lament is not typical Hoagland. He's one of the rare and lucky ones who succeed in keeping their sunny-side up; an optimist: "In the city and in the country there is a simple, underlying basis to life which we forget almost daily: that life is good."

Maybe he just feels lucky. There's currently a "vogue for death-of-nature books," as he puts it, and as professional writer Hoagland is happy to oblige. It enables him to spend approximately half the year absorbing the lustiness and decay of New York City, and the rest of the time on his wooded acres in Vermont or wandering around the continent in search of the elusive wilderness. The best of both worlds.

"I know by now that I'm unlikely to find a wilderness," Hoagland writes, "but in looking at the sandhill cranes of Jackson County, Mississippi, the yellow rails of Brazoria County, Texas, I may learn something.

"I set off to these wildlife refuges and salt swamps, touring in fat-wheeled marsh buggies and pirogues with motors on them, looking for alligators, chatting with the refuge manager. We stop at the golf club and talk with an old wolf trapper, now the greenskeeper . . ."

"Conservationists assume that a day will come when we will all want to pick up the pieces — that if only they can hold onto such living entities as the green turtle and the right whale for a little while longer, the consensus of civilized opinion will swing behind them. It is a questionable assumption, and so the gloomier, more visceral individuals go instead on the hunch that something may happen whereby finally the saved animals will inherit the earth. This isn't sensible, is misanthropic, and is a view they keep to themselves, but the most vivid observation to be made about animal enthusiasts — both the professionals who work in the field and, in particular, the amateurs — is that they are split between the rosiest, well-adjusted sort of souls and the wounded and lame."

On wilderness: "Wildness is indifference, wildness exists without any knowledge of whether or not it will be destroyed."

On walking in the city: "Muggers are herd creatures like the rest of us; they too have a 'rush hour.' So if a walker is indeed an individualist there is nowhere he can't go at dawn and not many places he can't go at noon. But just as it demeans life to live alongside a great river you can no longer swim in or drink from, to be crowded into the safer areas and hours takes much of the gloss off walking — one sport you shouldn't have to reserve a time and a court for."

On being an essayist: "The essay is a vulnerable form. Rooted in middle-class civility, it presupposes not only that the essayist himself be demonstrably sane, but that his readers also operate upon a set of widely held assumptions. Fiction can be hallucinatory if it wishes, and journalism impassive . . . but essays presuppose a certain standard of education in the reader, a world ruled by some sort of order . . . where people seek not fragmentation but a common bond."

Which probably explains why there are so few essayists about and why we should be so grateful to Edward Hoagland.
